WARRIORS OF ULTHUAN
Following on from last issue’s release of the High Elves army book for Warhammer, more reinforcements for the forces of Ulthuan arrive.

OXFORD STREET!
David Owen-Meller
White Dwarf 197 was the last time we dropped in on this, Britain’s most successful Games Workshop store. All sorts of exciting things have happened since then, including a complete refit and a whole new bunch of talented and friendly staff. So, if you’re thinking of paying the Plaza lads a visit, and want to know who is the resident expert on which army, then this is the article for you.

SUPREME WARRIORS
Gav Thorpe
Throughout the Imperium of the 41st Millennium there are over one thousand different Chapters of Space Marines, not all of whom strictly adhere to the Codex Astartes of Roboute Guilliman. In this article Gav has some ideas on how to organise such unusual Chapters to represent their unique character and background in your Epic 40,000 battles.

GOLDEN DEMON ’97
Alan Merrett
Are you are thinking of entering our annual miniature painting extravaganza? Then you’ll need to read this to find out how to go about entering, and what the categories will be this year.

THE EMPEROR’S TAROT
Warwick Kinrade
We present a new set of Fate Cards for commanders of Imperial Epic 40,000 armies, containing a full explanation of their use and background. The deck itself is printed on this month’s card sheets.
MAIDENS OF BATTLE
Mark Brendan
In the Warhammer kingdom of Bretonnia not all of the women hide behind their menfolk and call out for a Knight when evil threatens. Anyway, you certainly won’t see that sort of embarrassing behaviour from the likes of Repanse de Lyonesse or the Sorceresses of Bretonnia!

BLOODSCENT
Mark Brendan
When the space hulk of a notorious Ork raider is blown apart over a tropical death world, the Blood Angels descend to the surface to apprehend any survivors, but find none. They soon find out the reason why in this tense Warhammer 40,000 scenario, when a seething horde of Tyranids begins to pour from behind every tree and bush.

INFERNO!
Andy Jones
The Inferno! cometh. Inferno! is an all new Games Workshop publication appearing very soon. This month, White Dwarf features an Issue Zero to let you see what it’s going to be like. Inferno! will contain not only action packed comic strips and short stories, but also background information and technical data on every aspect of the strange and fantastic Games Workshop universes. Will Inferno! set the world on fire? We certainly think so!

A GRUDGE TOO FAR...
Tuomas Pirinen & Nigel Stillman
"The Saga of Drong and Helgar" is an ancient Dwarf tale of the feud between the Dwarf Clans of the Thrudlings, led by Drong, and the Bromlings, led by Queen Helgar with her High Elf ally Eldroth and his retinue.

Tuomas assumes the mantle of Queen Helgar and the High Elves, struggling with grim determination to keep hold of the throne of Krag Bryn. The foe is the Dwarf lord Drong and the Thrudlings, played by none other than Nigel Stillman, who have laid claim to the ancestral home.

This special battle report is not just one isolated incident, but a grand total of four complete battles fought over a number of days. Nigel and Tuomas fought out the entire Grudge of Drong campaign, complete with all the campaign scenery and special characters. So stand by as harsh words are spoken and steel clashes!
EDITORIAL

Twenty years old and still going strong! This issue marks two decades of White Dwarf magazine, and to celebrate we were going to have a few words with the Short One himself. Sadly, by the time we caught up with him he’d already been, um, celebrating rather a lot, and was unavailable for comment. Ah well, maybe next birthday.

In the meantime (while he’s sleeping it off) we’ve got something of a High Elf special for you (despite the Ork leering from the cover). Not only do we have a full run-down of the regions of Ulthuan and their valiant warriors, but our battle report includes their glorious warhost too. And it’s led by Mr High Elf himself, Tuomas Pirinen. What Tuomas doesn’t know about High Elves probably isn’t worth knowing, so who better than him to explain their battle tactics by example?

This month’s battle report is also a bit of an experiment, with four battles rolled into one article! It’s based on the Grudge of Drong Campaign Pack and includes rather more bloodshed than we can normally fit in. All of which just leaves me room to mention the Imperial Tarot on the card, and the mysterious Inferno!

IT’S IN THE CARDS

In this month’s card section, you will find a complete new deck of Epic 40,000 Fate Cards. The Emperor’s Tarot are designed specifically for use with Imperial armies, giving a whole new range of tactical options to all your Imperial generals.

While we’re on the subject of new Epic 40,000 stuff, next month we’ll be releasing everything you need for your Ork armies. Along with Gargants and Battle Fortresses, there’ll be Fighta-Bommerz, Pulsar Rokkits, Mekboy Speedstas, Ork Dreadnoughts, Flakwagons, Squiggoths... and so many more green things that we just don’t have the space to tell you about them all!

CORRESPONDENCE

We welcome comments about White Dwarf. Games Workshop games and Citadel miniatures. All letters except subscriptions and Mail Order should be addressed to: The Editor, White Dwarf, Games Workshop, Howard House, 16 Castle Boulevard, Nottingham NG7 1FL. Please mark your envelope clearly with the name of the game you are writing to us about. If you want a reply you must enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope (overseas readers should include IRCs). We receive an enormous amount of mail. We do read every letter, but it may take a little time for us to reply to you, so please be patient!

SUBMISSIONS

All material submitted to us for publication is only accepted on the assumption that the copyright in it is, by the very act of submission, unconditionally assigned by the author as beneficial owner and with full title guaranteed to Games Workshop Limited. We also retain the right to add and/or amend all material as we see fit. So, if you do not wish to assign copyright in this way, please do not send us your submission. We’re afraid we cannot work in any other way.
Have you ever wondered what the siege of an entire city looks like from the air? Or what sort of Kill Ratio a typical Eversor Assassin might achieve? Perhaps you are one of the many folk who have thought that a Games Workshop comic, or film would be the absolute height of cool. Yes? Well, Inferno is coming out soon, just for you!

Brought to you by our intrepid Publishing Generalissimo Andy Jones, Inferno is our new regular publication, taking all the diverse background elements that go to make our games so characterful, and binding them together in a single tome. In its pages you'll find short stories, comic strips, artwork, maps, background, diagrams... and absolutely no game rules!

In this issue of White Dwarf, we've given you a privileged preview of just the sort of stuff that will be appearing. This "Issue 0" is 16 pages long, starting on page 77, and contains such delights as Jonathan Green's "The Hounds of Winter" short story, Ralph Horsley's beautifully rendered Empire Steam Tank design sketches, and the prelude for Colin MacNeill and Gordon Rennie's "Bloodquest" Warhammer 40,000 comic strip, which is due to appear in Issue 2 of Inferno! Issue 1 will be on the shelves of your local Games Workshop stores very soon, so keep your eyes open for it.

GERROUTOFIT! OR I'LL STICK YER

There's only one thing scarier than a regiment of mean, green, brutal Orc warriors – a regiment of Orc warriors mounted on a herd of savage, bad-tempered, and loudly flatulent war boars!

No Orc and Goblin general worth his salt would be seen going to war without a unit or two of these fierce fighters. And don't they just look the part! Brian Nelson, who sculpted the models, has once again captured the essence of everything Ory in his miniatures. Everything from the massive, steel-toed boots, and the huge, brutal looking spear, to the savage expression on the Orc's face, tells you that here is a foe that you really don't want to have to meet on the battlefield.

FOR LYONESSE!

Also released this month is the Bretonnian general and standard bearer Repanse de Lyonesse, the first Citadel miniature sculpted by Michael Perry since his accident. You can read more about the history and background of Repanse, as well as how she was designed, sculpted and painted, later in the issue, in the Maidens of Battle article.

Also in the Maidens of Battle article are the Sorceresses of Bretonnia. You might be surprised to learn that the delicate features of these magical maidens were sculpted by the very same hands that made the vicious looking Orc Boar Boyz! Yes, having finished with the Orcs, Brian Nelson has now briefly turned his attention to the Bretonnians. Keep your eyes peeled for more of his excellent work in the future.
HIGH ELVES

ONWARDS, YOU HIGH ELVES!

Following close on the heels of last month's release of the Warhammer Armies High Elves book, there is now a veritable host of new High Elf miniatures to add to your collection.

The ranks of the Elven Archers are made up of the citizen soldiery of Ulthuan. Whether a craftsman, tradesman or artist in peace time, every Elf becomes a resolute and deadly fighter in times of war.

Few human Knights can equal the martial prowess of the Silver Helms. Though humans might well be stronger and heavier, they are clumsy and blundering barbarians compared to their Elven adversaries.

Ellyrian Reaver bands are formed of young Ellyrian nobles, who live in the wilds for months, or even years at a time, watching the coasts for any sign of enemy attack.

High magic is the greatest and most potent of all magics and its practitioners are the oldest and most mighty of all wizards in the Warhammer World. The most noted High Mages are the High Elves of Ulthuan, whose ancestors travelled to the Old World and taught the rudiments of sorcery to the savage humans who lived there.

Ulthuan's proud armies have never looked so good, thanks to the craftsmanship and attention to detail of figure designer Gary Morley. Just keep watching this space for more of his finely sculpted High Elves in the very near future.
Stranded on the Ork-infested world of Belar IV, Captain Orrin and his Space Marine Strike Force must fight to survive until reinforcements can arrive.

Can the mighty Blood Angels commander survive against the vicious horde of Warlord Azrebb, or will this be his last stand?

Give the Mail Order Trolls a call on (02) 9829 6111 to get your copy of Orrin’s Last Stand, and determine the fate of this hero of the Imperium.

After getting a couple of e-mails from other Gobbo fans, there seems to be one particular point from my article that a lot of people have missed. So I just thought I’d try and give a better explanation here.

The one question that everyone always ask is: “Why put the Goblin Shaman on a Dragon? Surely he would be better off amongst the big units of Goblins, drawing on their Waaagh! power to cast his spells, rather than swooping off around the battlefield on the back of a giant flying monster?”

Well, in actual fact, the whole point of putting the Shaman on the Dragon is to keep him away from the big units of Goblins and their Waaagh! energy. Goblin Shaman’s heads are notoriously fragile, and have a nasty tendency to explode when placed near big units of Goblins. To avoid this happening, my solution was to take a Night Goblin Shaman. He can use his magic mushrooms to cast spells, and is easily able to fly around the battlefield on his Dragon, avoiding any large build-ups of Waaagh! energy and the associated risks.

You might remember that a few months ago, back in issue 205, I was busy collecting an all-Goblin army ready for the 1996 Warhammer Staff Tournament. Well, while surfing the Internet over the past few months, couldn’t help noticing that there are a fair number of other all-Goblin players out there, eagerly swapping hints and tips across cyberspace.

Enemies of the Emperor beware! The next couple of months sees one of the most eagerly awaited releases ever for Warhammer 40,000. The Adepta Sororitas, the Sisters of Battle, are the military wing of the Ecclesiarchy. Fighting wars of faith, they go to battle against any who would stand against the Imperial Cult, and occasionally those who just happen to be in the way and look vaguely heretical!

Next month sees the arrival of the first of the Adepta Sororitas releases. From the talented hands of Citadel designer Joe Goodwin comes the brand new Sisters of Battle boxed set. Open it up and inside you'll find six of the most finely sculpted miniatures you're ever likely to see! And, as if that wasn't enough, the Sisters of Battle are also amongst the fiercest warriors in the entire galaxy!

Protected by their power armour, and armed with bolters, flamers and powers swords, the Battle Sister squads of the Adepta Sororitas are an essential addition to every Imperial army.

GRAND OPENING MADNESS

Our Retail Crusade continues to spread the word across Australia, with everybody having a lot of fun along the way!

CALLING ALL GAMES CLUBS

Here in the White Dwarf bunker, we're always on the lookout for interesting things to fill our pages with. But, lacking the all-seeing eye of Chaos, we sometimes have to rely on other sources to find out what's happening around the rest of the world. And this is where you lot come in!

If you're a member of a games club that regularly plays any of our games, then we want to know what you and your club are up to. If you're organising any special events, like a competition or a marathon 24 hour gaming session, then let us know. You might even find yourself getting a visit from one of our intrepid reporters out to get the scoop on your story!

WARRIORS OF ULTHUAN

The new Warhammer Armies High Elves is a great piece of work, and together with the excellent models make the army even better. Now the High Elves can take their rightful place among the most dangerous of foes...

In writing this latest version of Warhammer Armies High Elves, Rick and Tuomas have been careful to balance the High Elf army against the younger races. To this end they have added new rules for the citizen levy which forms the bulk of the army, and have put elite regiments like the White Lions of Chrace where they should be – one of the more frightening opponents to face on the battlefield (as befits the guardians of the Phoenix King himself!). We’ve included a sneak preview of them on the following pages although you’ll have to wait a couple of weeks for the models.

But the new book contains far more than just an updated army list (though it does have one of those too). It also includes considerably more background on the noble race of Ulthuan than its predecessor, like descriptions of the High Elf gods and definitions of sample High Elf runes (just the ticket for putting on shields and banners). Then there are the new special characters including the Everqueen herself, not to mention a hobby section containing a sample army and a hoard of other things. The preview on the following pages gives you a taste of the goodies in store...

Gary Morley has pulled out all the stops with his brilliant new range of High Elves. You saw the first of these, the Archers, last month, and this month most of the rest are released.

We’ve even included a sneak preview of the splendid White Lions of Chrace which aren’t out for a few weeks yet. You’ll have to wait, I’m afraid.

High Elf cavalry is basically usable in one of two ways. You can either field them as fast cavalry, like the Ellyrian Reavers shown here, or as a heavily-armoured strike force like the Caledor Dragon Princes. Silver Helms can be fielded as either, and you need to decide which you prefer. With no additional armour they are capable of manoeuvring as fast cavalry, but with full equipment they are as well protected as the Dragon Princes. Tuomas says that the High Elves cost a lot of points and only have Toughness 3, so anything that can improve their chances of surviving is a Good Thing.
High Elves have a strong sense of order and discipline, tempered by loyalty to kin and homeland. It is not surprising, then, to find that the military organisation of the High Elves closely parallels their social structure.

The Lord of each realm maintains his own forces, and is always ready to answer the call to arms of the Phoenix King. At any one time, a proportion of the citizens of every town and city are drafted into military service, and these citizens are seasonally rotated so that the entire population becomes trained to a high degree, with every High Elf knowing his place in his community’s regiment. Thus the High Elves who dwell in remote parts of Ulthuan that are exposed to raids, or who journey over seas to found a new colony, are always ready to defend themselves.
The Call To Arms

All Elves able to bear arms are honour bound to spend time serving as warriors in the levies of their cities, towns and villages. Some towns and cities are so large that they are able to maintain several regiments at a time.

In times of great danger, a general raising of the citizen levy will swell the forces of each realm many times over. At other times the regiments undertake patrols, guard important shrines and public places, act as watchmen at night, and form escorts for local officials, members of the ruling house and other important dignitaries.

In the coastal cities warriors spend much of their time at sea as marines, or travelling to the Old and New Worlds (as men insist on calling the western and eastern lands already known to the Elves for thousands of years!).

Throughout this full-colour section we have shown examples of the High Elf army we’ve painted at Games Workshop. The bright white tunics shown on these High Elves are one of our army’s most striking features. Notice how a little shading has been added to the folds and creases of the models. This was achieved by first painting the tunics a blue/grey colour. When dry, the rainier areas were carefully painted with white to finish the effect.

Each of our High Elf regiments has been given a single, strong identifying colour, deliberately chosen to contrast sharply against their white tunics. In this instance the regimental colour we have chosen is purple.

Again, this archer unit uses a single colour to give it its own strong theme. This time a rich blue has been used to pick out large areas such as the sashes, as well as smaller, more intricate details like feather tips, arrow flights and headdress details.
A well painted High Elf army is one of the most impressive sights you will see on a tabletop battlefield. This distinctive look is created by their striking white tunics and bright silver armour that are common to almost all of the troop types. A single bright colour added as detailing on cuifs, plumes, and shields adds variety. Varying this single colour helps to distinguish individual regiments without losing the coherent look of the whole army. Elite troops and special characters often stray from these basic guidelines to differentiate them from rank and file troops, but even these always retain a small amount of white and silver to link their colour schemes with the main force.

The Warhost of Prince Arandir, ready for battle. This force represents a typical 1,000 point army, and more details of its composition and how to collect the Warhost can be found from page 106 onwards.

Prince Tyrion leads a unit of Silver Helms into battle.

A Tyrion has been painted so that elements of his garb are echoed in his horse Malhandir's caparison and headgear.
The Kingdoms of Ulthuan

The kingdoms of Ulthuan organise and practise for war according to their own age-old traditions. These reflect the lands in which they dwell and the skills of the inhabitants. Warriors from the various realms are distinguished not only by their fighting style and traditional weaponry, but also by their banners, shield designs and other aspects of their uniforms.

The map below illustrates the traditional borders separating the Kingdoms of Ulthuan. There are ten Kingdoms that comprise Ulthuan as a whole, although this does not take into account small islands or archipelagoes, such as the Shifting Isles. Information about three of the ten Kingdoms of Ulthuan is given below, whilst details pertaining to the other seven Kingdoms can be found throughout the following pages.

The Shadowlands

The Kingdom once known as Nagarythe was destroyed by the sorcery of the Dark Elves during the Sundering. Its population was scattered and became nomadic, wandering in the wilderness of northern Ulthuan. The warriors of this realm are known as Shadow Warriors. Organised in small bands, they specialise in seeking and ambush long Dark Elf raiders. They favour dark tinted armour and tunics and plumes decorated with dark colours, especially blues and sombre greys.

Avelorn

This wooded realm is the domain of the Everqueen. Those who dwell here specialise in archery. It is said that some of the Wood Elf kindreds of Athel Loren in the Old World are descended from the people of Avelorn. The most renowned regiment of Avelorn is the Everqueen’s warrior guard of Elf Maids. Warriors of Avelorn are most likely to wear green plumes or embroidered decoration with floral designs. Armour may sometimes be styled in floral or leaf shapes.

Cothique

This realm has rocky coasts and treacherous seas, so it comes as no surprise that its inhabitants are all skilled seafarers. In the coastal cities half the Elven warriors are at sea at any time, while the other half are at home guarding the coasts. Elves whose families came from Cothique can be found in all the great Elven colonies overseas. The warriors are also sailors who spend much of their time at sea and fight most of their battles against airborne enemies and raiders. Encounters with sea monsters are a regular part of a warrior’s life, and some wear cloaks made from the hides of these creatures or armours styled in the fashion of sea serpent heads. Armour is often tinted with shades of blue or green.
Every Elf warrior can feel proud of the traditions of his town or city. He will march under a banner which may be centuries old, bearing an emblem that is even older.

Weapons and armour are often antique, carefully restored in the local armouries and preserved from generation to generation. When an Elf warrior hears the description of his distant forbears arrayed for battle in an ancient saga, he recognises the very same uniform that he wears.

Yresse

is a misty realm surrounding the old city of Tor Yrresse. The people of this land raise regiments of some of the most determined and steadfast warriors in Ulthuan, as befits the homeland of Eltharion and so many other paladins. The favoured weapon is the spear, and the warriors fight shoulder to shoulder with almost unshakable discipline.
Guards of the Realms

Although the levy system provides Ulthuan with a massive reserve of troops, as well as a permanent body of warriors, there is still a need for professional warriors.

These take the form of the various Guard units, such as the Phoenix Guard, who protect the Shrine of Asuryan, the Sea Guard, who man the walls and harbours of Lothrn, the Everqueen's Maiden Guard and the Phoenix King's Lion Guard. Each of these units has its own distinctive appearance, styles of dress, and weaponry.

▲ To reflect their status as an elite regiment, the armour of these Phoenix Guard models has been painted gold rather than the usual silver. Their cloaks have been painted white with a striking red and yellow design depicting leaping flames.

▲ The fiery motif of the Phoenix Guards' cloaks has been carried through to the banner born by the unit's standard bearer. Again, flames and ashes feature on the banner, but this time a phoenix is shown leaping from the flames.

Chirace is a mountainous and forested region. The inhabitants are all renowned as skilled hunters. Warriors often wear furs and animal pelts over their armour as cloaks or decorative collars. The most famous are the Lion Guard who guard the Phoenix King. They are distinguished by their white lion pelts and woodsmen's axes.

Painting High Elf Armour

The predominant colour of High Elf armour is silver. When painting High Elf armour, start by giving it a base coat of Mithril Silver. When the paint is dry, apply a thin, watered down layer of Armour Wash over the base coat. Finally, once this second layer has dried, gently drybrush over raised areas of the armour with a second application of Mithril Silver, to bring out the highlights of the armour.

Although High Elf armour is predominantly silver, at times there are opportunities to use other metallic colours such as Burnished Gold, or even Beaten Copper. This is particularly appropriate for Champions and heroes, who often wear heavily ornamented armour that is centuries old.

If you are not using Mithril Silver, follow the guidelines given above, and just substitute the two applications of Mithril Silver with whatever colour you have chosen to use.

The armour on horses (known as barding) is painted in exactly the same way as other Elven armour. One trick you can try to make barding complement the colours of the horse’s caparison (the cloth underneath the barding) is to use a coloured wash rather than armour wash. So, for instance, if the predominant colour of the caparison were blue, you could use a blue wash.
Nobles of Ulthuan

The nobility of Ulthuan has a strong military tradition of its own, and there are few amongst them who are not expert riders and warriors.

In battle nobles from all of Ulthuan band together into units of Knights - or Ithultaen, which literally means silver helm, a title which is derived from their distinctive tall and shining helms. Few human Knights can equal the martial prowess of the Silver Helms. Though humans might well be stronger and heavier, they are clumsy and blundering barbarians compared to their Elven adversaries.

- The barding on the steeds of these Silver Helm Knights has been painted in exactly the same way as the armour of their riders, using multiple coats of silver to achieve a really polished, shiny look. Notice also how the horse depicted on the unit's banner is the same colour as the horses themselves.

- Silver Helms are another one of our army's elite regiments. All of the steeds were deliberately painted pure white with little variation to produce a unified look to the regiment. The main colour is blue, but small details on the steeds and riders have been painted a rich, leathery red colour.
The heroes in any Warhammer army are powerful individual models and you can really go to town when painting them. Our High Elf heroes are no exception and we have tried to paint each of them as spectacularly as possible.

One blue wave pattern and heart motif on the shield of this High Elf hero have been repeated on his horse's caparison. Mounted High Elf characters and heroes provide many opportunities for this type of extra special painting.

As well as using more colours than you would normally use on a regimental model you can also distinguish your heroes by applying patterning to their girth or to the caparisons of their steeds.

The model has had the same heart pattern applied to both the hero's clothing and the caparison of his horse. The rich purple colour used for the patterning is also used as the main colour elsewhere on the model.

Small amounts of green and blue have been used on this model, yet because they have been applied sparingly, they do not overpower the striking red colour which is the model's main feature.

The Pegasus has been painted white, grey and black, leaving the brighter colours like red and yellow for the rider. This helps the rider to stand out when viewed on the tabletop. The model has been mounted on to a carefully modelled scenic base. Modelling a special base in this way is a good technique for showing off an impressive model.
Caledor is a sparsely populated, rugged, volcanic region which has been home to Dragons since ancient times. The folk of Caledor favour hot fiery colours for their plumes and decorative motifs, and they are the only Elves who commonly use black for plumes and crests. The taming of Dragons is a warrior tradition in Caledor, and it is from here that the Dragon Princes come. Their armour is often tinted green or sometimes red, and its design is intended to reflect the scales and horny spines of Dragons. Such is the pride of the Dragon Princes, that theirs is the only banner that remains erect whilst all the other banners are dipped to acknowledge the rule of the Phoenix King prior to battle.

![Image of a dragon and High Elf soldiers]

The armour of the Dragon Princes and their steeds' banners feature a dynamic green and red colour scheme. However, the white horses, pennants and shield designs make the regiment fit in with the rest of our High Elf army.
For our army we have decided to paint all of our Ellyrian Reavers on dappled grey horses. This provides a marked contrast with the other cavalry regiments in the army. Of course, there are many other colours we could have used to paint these steeds, including pure white, light browns, black and other types of grey.

Ellyrion is a region of verdant open plains, and is the domain of the horse kindreds with their herds of fine Elven Steeds. By tradition, the warriors of this realm are expert riders, taught from a young age the arts of horseback warfare. These warriors, known as Ellyrian Reavers, are experts with both spear and bow. A distinctive feature of the Reavers is their elegant, flowing plumed helmets.

The dappling on this Ellyrian Reaver's mount has been applied so that it fades out towards the steed's hind quarters and neck, as it would on a real horse. You can achieve this either by making the dapples smaller near those areas, or by applying softer strokes of paint.

Painting your own shield designs can be very satisfying, but also a bit daunting. Luckily there are a number of alternatives. Some shields are cast or moulded with relief designs which are relatively easy to paint. Games Workshop also produce a wide variety of waterslide transfers.
Eataine is the mightiest of the Kingdoms of Ulthuan, centred around the Emerald gate and the city of Lothern. Many merchants dwell here and send forth colonists to the four corners of the known world. This is a populous region which maintains a large number of troops. Its warriors are skilled with either the bow or the spear and are always excellently equipped with the finest armour and weapons. The nobles dress in splendid robes and often wear ornate armour decorated with precious gemstones and valuable metals. These warriors fight on land and sea and have detachments skilled in the use of the repeater bolt thrower, which can be either mounted onboard or removed for use on land. The best warriors serve in the Sea Guard, a large body of troops whose regiments are based in Lothern, but who also travel throughout the world with the Phoenix King’s armies.

Tiranoc Originally, this coastal realm had broad expanses of sandy beach and rolling downlands, rising suddenly into snow capped peaks. Of all the realms of Ulthuan it was the most wealthy and the most densely populated. The warriors followed a very ancient tradition of fighting from chariots as suited the landscape. During the Sundering Tiranoc was flooded by the sea and disappeared almost completely. The coastal cities were overwhelmed and their mercantile descendants survive today only in far flung colonies. Inland, on the lower slopes of the mountains, the warriors cling to their age-old tradition as charioteers of great skill.
Shields and Banners

Banners and shields act as a colourful focal point for your units and heroes, and are designed to reflect their bearer's character or the unit to which they belong. There are no formal rules to adhere to when designing shields and banners. Most are ancient, traditional designs that have been passed down from generation to generation, and incorporate imagery unique to each specific regiment.

High Elves favour imagery which depicts fantastic creatures, such as dragons, the phoenix, and sea serpents, to name but a few. Many of these images appear in fully rendered scenes, such as a night sky, or stormy sea, rather than just sitting on plain, single coloured backgrounds. This is not to say that High Elves do not also produce simple designs, just that the more complicated the imagery, the more ancient and valued the shield or banner is likely to be.
Saphery
This realm is noted for wizardry and within it stands the White Tower, home of the Loremasters of Hoeth. It is a sparsely populated land. The nobility of Saphery study the arts of magic and many choose to fight in battle as wizards.

From all over Ulthuan determined young Elves also come to Saphery in the hope of being accepted into the Order of Swordmasters of Hoeth. These elite warriors are trained by the Loremasters in the most ancient and arcane of martial arts. Their distinctive weapon is the double-handed broadsword; a massive weapon they wield as easily as an ordinary Elf might brandish a knife or dagger.

Painting Gemstones

High Elf models are often sculpted with precious gems and jewels, especially champions and special character models. As well as adding a touch of class to your models, gemstones are also surprisingly easy to paint.

First decide what basic colour you wish to paint your gemstone. For example, if you were painting a red gemstone, you would start by painting it a bright red colour. Once the red base coat was dry, you would then apply a band of dark red shading to the top of the gem, and then a band of orange highlight to the base of it. Leaving an area in the middle where the basic red colour would still show through. When the highlight and shading is dry, add a tiny, pure white dot to the top of the gem, to help create the illusion that it is catching reflected light. If you want a really shiny look, you can give the gem a thin coat of gloss varnish as a finishing touch.

OXFORD STREET!

We send our ace reporter to the recently refurbished Oxford Street Games Workshop store, the busiest in the world!

The first thing I had to do was to get there. Our Oxford Street store is situated in the Plaza Shopping Centre which fronts onto what appeared to be London’s busiest street. One of the first sights to draw my attention as I approached the door was the Black Library cabinet in the front window. The cabinet contains the Blood Angels Terminator helmet and storm bolter which you can see in these pages, and has been on tour around the country. After being met by Jamie the store

All the staff at Oxford Street have been painting for a long time. So even if you’ve never picked up a paint brush before and you just want an introduction to painting, or if you need any advice on making your army look even better, the staff are always happy to help.
The Oxford Street store has its own guardian of truth, justice and the Warhammer 40,000 way. Brother Karlson of the 3rd Company!

Left and below: Two new gamers try out the exciting new Epic 40,000. You can ask any of the lads for an introduction to any of our games.

Left: Warp speed Mr Chapman! Andy becomes a blur of dynamic energy whilst helping this young visitor in the store. If you are having a hard time deciding what miniatures and boxed sets you need for your army, why not talk to a member of staff? They're always on hand to help you decide what's best for your force.
With its extensive refit complete and everything looking nice and shiny, why not go down to the Oxford Street store? You can meet our notoriously charismatic staff and check out the awesome Black Library displays. It will also give you the chance to learn about our games and models so you can decide what to buy when the store has its big Grand Opening at the end of this month!

PLAZA STAFF HOT PAINTING TIPS!

An unusual conversion of the Space Marine bike model by Stewart Ellis.

1. Always thin your paint. Use one of the shading washes instead of water, as this gives you a good strong colour whilst still keeping the paint thin.

2. Take your time and learn from others. Don’t be afraid to try out new techniques and methods. With the staff to help you, the store is a great place in which to learn.

3. Paint Vermin Fur as a base coat for human flesh.

4. To highlight black, mix Chaos Black with Hawk Turquoise.

5. Undercoat Orcs and Goblins with Chaos Black as this gives a good dark base to work from.

Commissar Bone, (head of French retail) said that “The Oxford Street store is quite simply the best shopping experience I’ve ever had!”

The mighty Slann Mage-Priest painted by Jamie. It is patterned after a 3-striped poison arrow frog!

Whilst at the Oxford Street store I managed to prise the secrets of their splendidly painted armies out of the staff. Here are the results of my endeavours...

Paul Hicks has a superb Savage Orc and Goblin army. The centrepiece of this huge green-skinned horde is an amazing scratch-built Giant, which stands a good 10” tall and towers over everything else. He built the huge humanoid out of modelling putty and used all sorts of old parts from his huge bits box to add extra detail. In order to show off how truly massive Paul’s Giant is compared to the Citadel giant, we stood them side by side. As you can see it’s enormous!

Note the intricate Dragon tattoo. It took a complete day to paint this one small area of detail. Paul went to his local library to get some good reference books about Dragons and found some useful artwork to provide the inspiration for this really neat piece of work.
The huge range of Citadel miniatures and the complete range of Games Workshop games are all available at our Australian stores. Each of our stores is staffed by friendly gamers who will be more than happy to chat about what's new in the hobby, play an introductory game with you, and also show you how to paint and model your miniatures. On late night shopping evenings we have a special Games Night where you can come along and join in a game of Warhammer 40,000, Warhammer or Epic 40,000.
SUPREME WARRIORS

Amongst the armies of the Imperium, the Space Marines of the Adeptus Astartes form an elite fighting force. There are roughly a thousand Chapters of Space Marines spread through the Imperium, each with its own particular style of organisation and fighting. The majority of Chapters adhere quite closely to the doctrines of the Codex Astartes, an immense tome of organisational, strategic and tactical information which was written after the Horus Heresy by Roboute Guilelliman, Primarch of the Ultramarines. The knowledge within its many volumes form the basis of the Ultramarines Chapter and their successors, while many other Chapters, such as the Dark Angels and Blood Angels, vary from its text in only minor ways. There a few completely unorthodox Chapters, foremost among them being the Space Wolves, whose organisation and style of war bear no resemblance to the Codex Astartes.

Each of these Chapters is fiercely proud of its heritage and will defend its traditions against all arguments. A Space Marine Chapter’s organisation, battle tactics, uniforms, banners and all other aspects will reflect the character of its leaders, founding planet (or planet) and Primarch. Even events within the Chapter’s history will continue to have a lasting effect. For example, in one particular battle, warriors from the Dark Angels Deathwing (the first company of Terminators) saved one of the Chapter’s founding worlds from a Genestealer cult. Following the rituals of their home, the Space Marines repainted their green armour white, which is their colour of death, and did battle with the Genestealers. From that point on the Deathwing has always worn white armour, a homage to the sacrifice of the brave warriors who died many millennia ago.

FIELDING THE ARMY

For extra information concerning the background and organisation of the many Space Marine Chapters, you can look at the range of Warhammer 40,000 Codex books. Codex Ultramarines details the organisation of the Ultramarines Chapter itself, and many of the other Chapters that were raised in subsequent foundings using the gene-seed of Roboute Guilliman, the Ultramarines Primarch. Details of the Dark Angels and Blood Angels Chapters (and their successors) can be found in Codex Angels of Death, while the Space Wolves also have their own book.

White Dwarf also regularly runs articles on the Space Marines, and we hope to give more information on other Chapters in the future (particularly the Imperial Fists, White Scars and other remaining First Founding Chapters). Not only do all these sources provide information for some of the better known Chapters, but they will also spark off ideas for you to invent your own.

Most of these forces can be represented within the existing Army of the Imperium list, as I’ll show. The list has enough flexibility to allow a wide variety of different formations and detachments, which can be used to emphasise the character and temperament of the Chapter you are fielding. As well as just choosing your army and detachments in an imaginative manner, you can take your army one or two stages further. Firstly, you can invent new detachment lists to choose from, restricting certain troops and allowing a greater choice or numbers of others. Secondly, you can invent totally new troops, whether from the ground up with their own profile or, more straightforwardly, by inventing a new special rule or using the existing specialist abilities and upgrades in a new way.

BATTLE ORGANISATION

As well as the character of the Chapter itself, most Space Marine armies have their own individual style and tactics. Depending on the nature of the campaign, warriors from different Companies will be sent to fight. If the Space Marines are responding quickly to a request for help, they will despatch their fastest strike cruisers laden with Thunderhawks, drop pods and fast attack troops such as Bikes, Land Speeders and Assault squads. Once these troops have established themselves in the war zone (sometimes just a single hive or settlement, but also whole continents, planets or star systems) the heavier firepower will be brought in. Tactical squads, Devastators and tanks will be moved to the conflict, boosting the strength of the Space Marines even as the first elements of the Chapter attack the enemy and attempt to sever their lines of supply, breaking up their battle lines and destroying their reinforcements.

Your Space Marine force could reflect this at any stage of its development, and all you have to do is choose the troops from the lists which fit this character. Whether you want to fight a lightning strike, a steady implacable advance, or opt for a more static defence, the Army of the Imperium allows you to choose what you need.

THE FIRST AND TENTH

A Codex Chapter (one which follows the Codex Astartes closely) comprises ten companies, each of which is made up of a variety of squads depending on the Company. For example, the fourth Company of the Ultramarines is a Battle Company, comprising 6 Tactical squads, 2 Assault squads and 2 Devastator squads, with attendant support vehicles in the form of Rhinos, Dreadnoughts, Land Speeders and Bikes. The Company is an organisational unit though, and on the battlefield most Companies are usually split into smaller detachments, and often combine with elements of other Companies to fulfill their role on the battlefield. Each Chapter also maintains its own armoury and has a pool of Vindicators, Predators, Land Raiders and other support vehicles which are assigned to squads on a battle by battle basis.

The first Company of a Codex Chapter is the Veteran Company, from which the much feared Terminators are drawn. If you want to field a first Company detachment in your Epic 40,000 army, it's a simple matter to use the lists to represent this. In terms of the detachment's Main Force, you should limit yourself to choosing Terminator squads, with mainly Land Raiders as support, and some standard Tactical squads to represent the Veterans in power armour. In contrast, the Tenth Company would comprise Scouts (since the Tenth Company is the Scout Company) with any support units drawn in from other elements of the Chapter. There's a sample detachment card for each of these below.

OTHER CHAPTERS

Although the majority of Chapters follow the structures of the Codex Astartes quite closely there are some whose organisation and tactics vary wildly from its doctrines. Some, such as the Space Wolves, have strong traditions from their home planet and Primarch which they revere above the teachings of others. Other Chapters have suffered from horrendous battle losses, such as the Scythe of the Emperor who faced the initial onslaught of Tyranid Hive Fleet Kraken. More still are isolated from the Imperium, out on the Eastern Fringe on millennia-long crusades or cut off by warp storms for centuries, and are forced to adapt and change to survive.
The army lists for Space Marine detachments in Epic 40,000 are for those Chapters that adhere to the Codex Astartes, the massive tome which describes the strict rules for the organisation, tactics and doctrines of a Space Marine Chapter. Whilst most adhere to its teachings there are some that do not.

All of this is possible without having to write a single new rule. It is simply manipulating the detachment army lists in the desired way. Of course, if you're going to do anything even slightly wacky you'll have to sort this out with your opponent first. Remember that you're not creating a Chapter to make an unbeatable army, but to provide your own troops with extra character and personalisation. Being able to field a force which is uniquely yours is very rewarding and can lead onto all sorts of ideas for scenarios and campaigns.

GETTING MORE EXTREME

All I've talked about so far is manipulating the organisation of the detachment lists to achieve a desired result. In many cases this may well be all you need to do. However, one thing that can make a Chapter really stand out is having a detachment or troop type which is uniquely theirs. For example, the Dark Angels have the highly skilled Ravenwing, the Blood Angels have their frenzied Death Company and the Space Wolves squad organisation is wholly different to any other Chapter.

In this article you will see various new detachments which you can include in your Army of the Imperium. Although they have undergone slightly more drastic changes than the ones I've talked about so far, they are still pretty straightforward. As well as altering the composition of the detachments, I've added a simple special rule which further emphasises their character. For the Space Wolves, White Scars and Ravenwing this is a completely new rule, but for the Death Company I've simply used some of the special abilities that already exist, namely Assault, Save and Rampage. You will also notice that their organisation, such as access to Support units, has been changed from normal too. You will find that even these fairly minor tweaks strongly influence their role and effect on the battlefield, enabling you to create specific detachments fairly easily.

Adding a special rule to certain troops, or for the detachment overall, is by far the best method for creating specialised troops. Epic has great scope for this kind of individual characterisation. There’s no reason why you should limit yourself to whole detachments either. For example, you may like to have Commander Darte, Chapter Master of the Blood Angels, with his jump pack and Veteran Assault squad bodyguard. You can look at existing options and upgrades for an idea of any change in the points cost needed, and this shouldn’t normally be more than two or three points per unit. Changes which are worth more than this should be given some serious consideration first.

You can take a look at the detachment lists I've devised for the Blood Angels Death Company and the Dark Angels
The 2nd Company of the Dark Angels Chapter is known as the Ravenwing and is essentially a reconnaissance company. It is made up of Land Speeders and Bike squadrons. Detachments from its ranks are used in a scouting or fast attack role, where speed is more important than armour or raw firepower.

The riders and pilots of the Ravenwing are extremely skilled, and the efficiency with which they handle their machines enables them to dodge incoming shots, maximise cover and make it very difficult for the enemy to target them.

To represent this lessened vulnerability, the obvious choice would be to increase the Armour value of the troops involved. However, when a rider or driver is concentrating on enemy fire, their accuracy will obviously be hampered somewhat. Already there was a solution to this, from the rules for troops on Assault orders. Assaulting troops are dedicating themselves to closing with the enemy, so their firepower is halved.

This seemed a reasonable limiting factor – the Ravenwing are concentrating or making themselves difficult targets so the same penalty doesn’t seem unreasonable.

Because of this limiting factor, the Ravenwing’s special ability shouldn’t really cost them any points at all. After all they are sacrificing something to gain another. However, the very fact that they have this skill gives them a greater deal of flexibility and obviously makes them proportionately better in their preferred situation (moving around near the enemy) so some points increase would be needed (nothing comes free!). A straightforward addition of 2 points to all the troops with this skill seemed very reasonable, putting it into a similar area to the Jump Packs special ability which generally costs around 2 points per unit too.

The following detachment is an addition to the Army of the Imperium list from Epic Warhammer 40,000. You can include as many Ravenwing detachments in your army as you wish. However, you should note that the Ravenwing is just a single company and can muster a maximum of 50 units (split as you wish).

This limit is only possible if the entirety of the Ravenwing is present on one battlefield (a rare occurrence indeed).

Ravenwing: The Ravenwing may go onto special Dodge orders at the start of the movement phase. The detachment uses all of its speed and skill to make themselves a blur of movement, making it extremely difficult for the enemy to accurately target them. Indicate this by placing the Order dice with the ‘3’ face up next to the detachment. If the Ravenwing is on Dodge orders the detachment may move normally in the movement phase. All units in the detachment may add +1 to their Armour value (up to a maximum of 6) but must then have their firepower (rounding up).

Main Force

Choose up to 10 squads from the following list.

- Ravenwing Bike Squadron . . . . 12 points per unit
  Consists of 1 to 3 Space Marine Bike units (Ravenwing)

- Land Speeder Squadron 22 points per unit
  Consists of 1 to 3 Land Speeders (Ravenwing)

- Attack Bike Squadron . . . . 12 points per unit
  Consists of 1 to 3 Attack Bikes (Ravenwing)

Up to 1 Space Marine Librarian . . . 31 points
Consists of 1 Space Marine Bike unit (Paymaster, Hero, Ravenwing)

WHITE SCARS DETACHMENT

The White Scars Primarch, Jaghatai Khan, was raised on a primitive planet inhabited by tribes of nomadic warriors. His superior physical abilities and strategic genius allowed him to weld together a coalition of tribesmen to fight against the growing power of a Chaos cult that was spreading through the east of the major continent. In a final battle on the Lon-Suen plains, Jaghatai led fifteen thousand horsemen in a gallant charge against the crude gunpowder cannons of the Chaos cultists. Despite horrendous losses the charge smashed the enemy. The fierce Mathurin tribesmen cut down the cultists as they tried to flee, butchering every last one of them. In the following decade Jaghatai Khan went on to conquer much of the planet, before the Emperor arrived and, eventually, the Primarch was welcomed back into the Imperium. When the White Scars were founded it was from the fiercely proud Mathurin that they drew their first recruits.

The White Scars are famous for launching lightning fast hit-and-run attacks against their enemy - they are masters of lightning warfare. There were a few possibilities available to represent this, such as allowing a second move in the assault phase when on special orders, or allowing them to double their Speed at a cost of firepower. However, I thought that this didn’t capture the character of the White Scars, since really the detachment should get involved in a close quarter fight at some time (ie a firefight or assault). The following special rule captures the feel of these rapid strikes and neatly complements the mobile White Scars detachments. Like the Ravenwing, this enables the White Scars to excel at particular types of attacks, but it is useful rather than powerful.

An Army of the Imperium may include as many White Scars detachments as you wish. White Scars do not have any Armour detachments.

Hurt and Run: The White Scars attack from nowhere, unleash a devastating volley of fire or brief charge into close combat, and then disappear as suddenly as they arrived. To represent this, White Scars detachments can always make a retreat move after a close combat or firefight, even if they win. This enables them to attack the enemy and then withdraw to safety to avoid an unfavourable assault or firefight from other enemy detachments close by. This rule applies to every unit in the detachment, including support. Note that if they choose to make a retreat move they will be destroyed as normal if they end their move within 15cm of the enemy.

Notes: If a Space Marine detachment consists only of Space Marine infantry units it may be deployed using drop pods. See the Scenario Special Rules section in the Epic 40,000 Battles Book for details of using drop pods. Space Marines may always deploy in drop pods, regardless of the scenario being played.

Any unit that is part of the detachment can be designated as the detachment HQ, subject to the detachment’s chain of command. If the original HQ is eliminated the next unit below on the chain of command becomes the new HQ.

Chain of command: Khan > Brother Priests > Terminators > White Scars > Any other unit.
SPACE WOLVES DETACHMENT

Space Wolves are renowned for their ferocity and skill in close combat. Even the heavy weapon squads of the Long Fangs are fearsome opponents in the thick of close quarter fighting. Rather than having ten standard Companies, the Space Wolves have twelve Great Companies, each of which comprises Long Fangs heavy weapon squads, Grey Hunters and Blood Claws. Each Great Company is a self-contained fighting organisation, with its own transports, armoured vehicles and support.

The Space Wolves are excellent fighters in close combat and the best way to represent this is by an increase in their Assault value. First of all I considered giving everybody the Assault special rule, but decided against this for two reasons: Firstly, the Assault rules not only increases an unit’s Assault value, but also reduces their Range to 10cm. For certain troops, most notably the heavy weapon armed Long Fangs, this seemed inappropriate. Secondly, if everybody had the Assault specialist ability, how would you differentiate the dedicated assault troopers of the Blood Claws squad? In the end it seemed reasonable to create the new Space Wolves special rule, just like the Ravenwing rule.

An Army of the Imperium may include as many Space Wolves detachments as you wish. Space Wolves Armour detachments are chosen from the normal Space Marine Armour detachment list (note that Space Wolves tanks do not benefit from the following special rule).

Space Wolves: Space Wolves are renowned for their ferocity in close combat, and any unit with the Space Wolves ability adds +1 to its Assault value (this can be combined with assault for a total bonus of +2). Note that you add this +1 to the Assault value after doubling for the Hero ability or halving for Heavy Weapons, not before.

This rule only applies to Space Wolves infantry and Bikes, Attack Bikes and Land Speeders. Space Wolves armoured vehicles, including Dreadnoughts, gain no additional benefit.

Main Force

Choose up to 10 squads from the following list.

Wolf Guard

Blood Claws Land Speeder squadron
Attack Bike squadron
Support Weapon battery
Dreadnought
Land Raider
Predator
Razorback
Whirlwind
Vindicator

Notes: If a Space Wolves detachment consists entirely of infantry units it may be deployed using drop pods. See the Scenario Special Rules section in the Epic 40,000 Battle Book for details of using drop pods. Space Marines may always deploy in drop pods, regardless of the scenario being played.

Any unit that is part of the detachment can be designated as the detachment HQ, subject to the detachment’s chain of command. If the original HQ is eliminated the next unit below on the chain of command becomes the new HQ.

Chain of command: Wolf Lord > Rune Priest > Wolf Guard > Space Wolves > Any other unit.
WAR ON ALL
In the depths of space, vast derelict spacecraft drift ever closer toward the Imperium. These space hulks harbour the terrible menace of the Genestealers – savage alien monstrosities, whose only purpose is to destroy. The fate of all mankind lies in the hands of the Space Marines – the galaxy's finest warriors and the only force that stands between humanity and the aliens' relentless onslaught. Clad in mighty Terminator armour, the Space Marines must obliterate all trace of the Genestealers or die in the attempt.

In Space Hulk two rival players control squads of Space Marine Terminators or vast hordes of Genestealers in savage combat amongst the cramped corridors of derelict space vessels.

Not suitable for children under 36 months due to small parts and essential pointed components.

The 1997 Golden Demon tournament will be held at Games Day later this year (28th of September). We are listing the competition categories here so that people can get on with painting and modelling their entries. If last year is anything to go by, we expect there to be over 2,500 entries to the Golden Demon tournament. As before, there are ten categories to enter, but in the end there can only be one winner of the Golden Demon Slayer Sword.

Over the next few months we will be publishing full details of how to enter the Golden Demon Tournament and all the other Games Day competitions. These will certainly be similar to last year’s arrangements, and we’ve also kept the various entry qualifications broadly the same as at previous events. Full details of these are printed on the following pages.

We are sure that the standard of entries to this year’s Golden Demon will be as excellent as always, but what excites us most is the sheer number of people who get involved and enter the tournament. It is this, above all else, that makes the Golden Demon a special event for all of us at Games Workshop, so dig out your paints and brushes and go for it!
1. Best Warhammer 40,000 Miniature

   Any single Warhammer 40,000 miniature on a standard round slottabase. Individual models mounted on bikes and the like should be entered in Category 3.

2. Best Warhammer 40,000 Squad

   This category is for Warhammer 40,000 squads chosen from the Squads section of the Codex army lists. Note: Space Marine squads must be full ten-man squads and not five-man combat squads. Other races may be chosen within the army list parameters (e.g., Dark Reapers 3-7 models, Snarling Herd 2-10 bases plus a Runtherd, etc.). This category includes squads mounted on bikes, Jetbikes and Warbikes as described in the various Codex lists. All models must be presented on standard gaming bases (slottabases where they’re appropriate).

3. Best Warhammer 40,000 Vehicle

   This category is open to single Warhammer 40,000 vehicle, Dreadnought or War Walker models. This category includes individual small vehicles like bikes if appropriate to the model and the army, e.g., Eldar character on a Jetbike or Space Marine Chaplain on a bike.

4. Best Warhammer Single Miniature

   This category is open to single Warhammer miniatures on standard slottabases up to 25mm x 50mm maximum size (cavalry base). Models on Monster bases should be entered into the Monsters and Creatures category.

5. Best Warhammer Command Group

   Entries for this category consist of four Warhammer miniatures on their standard slottabases (25mm x 50mm maximum size as for single miniatures). Your entry must include a Standard Bearer, a Musician, and a Champion for a single regiment plus an Army General or a Wizard.

1997 COMPETITOR’S GUIDELINES

- You can only enter once in each category and all entries to the Golden Demon Awards must be painted Citadel Miniatures.
- All single miniatures must be mounted on the appropriate gaming bases.
- Conversions are allowed, but should be consistent with the atmosphere of the game world and spirit of the miniatures.
- Overall, the judges will be looking for well-painted miniatures that adhere to the imagery and ethos of Games Workshop’s different fantasy universes.
- All entries to the 1997 Golden Demon Awards must be personally handed in and registered at the National Indoor Arena, Birmingham, on the 28th of September 1997.
- Competitors will be fully responsible for the transport of their own entries to and from the competition and for storing their own transport and packing materials on the day.
- Once they have been booked in, Games Workshop undertakes to treat all entries with the greatest care, but can accept no responsibility for loss or damage to individual entries. Entry to the competition is entirely at the competitor’s own risk.
- Entry into any of the competitions gives Games Workshop the right to display, photograph and publish any entry as they see fit. The judges’ decision is final and no correspondence will be entered into.

Empire Standard Bearer by Matthew Piper, 1996 1st place Warhammer single miniature.
6. Best Warhammer Monster or Warhammer 40,000 Creature

This category is open to Warhammer or Warhammer 40,000 monsters on 40mm x 40mm or 50mm x 50mm standard bases. This covers Avatars, Ogryns and Tyranids and you may include a ridden monster if you wish eg: Orc Wyvern, Chaos Dwarf Bull Taurus, etc.

7. Best Necromunda Gang

Entries for this category consist of an eight model Necromunda gang (4 models for Spyre teams). All models must be presented on standard round slottabases.

8. Best Epic 40,000 Titan

This category is for a single model of a Titan or Gargant, on its standard base. This includes Warlord Titans (Imperial or Chaos), Imperator Titans, Gargants, Great Gargants, Mega-Gargants, Revenant Titans, Phantom Titans and Tyranid Bio-Titans (Hierophants and Hierodules).

9. Best Epic 40,000 Battleforce

Entries to this category should be made up of an Epic 40,000 force consisting of one or two Detachments of models. There should be no more than 10 vehicles or War Engines and no more than 20 units of infantry or bikes.

10. Battle Scene

Entries for this category consist of a Battle Scene from either Warhammer, Warhammer 40,000 or Epic 40,000. The display must not be larger than 30cm x 30cm and the maximum permitted height is 30cm. The Battle Scene should have at least two miniatures arranged in a combat pose, but otherwise there are no restrictions on the Battle Scene's theme or content.
The Young Bloods Competition

The Young Bloods painting competition is open to any competitors aged 14 years or under. Your entry should consist of any single Citadel miniature, either Warhammer or Warhammer 40,000, on its standard gaming slottabase (25mm round base for Warhammer 40,000, 20mm or 25mm square base for Warhammer).

Note that this year you can enter both metal and plastic miniatures in the Young Bloods competition.

The Open Competition

The Open Competition is literally what it says – an open opportunity for you to let your imagination run riot! There are no restrictions on your entry, so it could range from a single miniature to a sweeping diorama. Anyone can enter the Open Competition, including Games Workshop staff, so beware that the competition will be stiff! In fact this year we are even going to let Mike McVey enter to increase the pressure on Dave Andrews who has won both of the previous Open Competitions. As Mike will be entering himself, the Open will this year be judged by a panel of notaries including John Blanche and Rick Priestley. Remember that no matter how wild your entry, they will be looking for well-painted and modelled miniatures that adhere to the imagery and ethos of Games Workshop’s fantasy universes. You are also allowed to include conversions if you wish, but they too should be consistent with the atmosphere of the game world and spirit of the miniatures.
In the pollutant marshes and tangled ruins the most vicious gangs of the Underhive contend with the deadliest of Necromunda's outlaw breed, warriors they call Outlanders.

In the deep Underhive outlaws and mutants fight for survival. This expansion for the Necromunda game includes four new gangs: Ratskin Renegades, Redemptionist Crusaders, degenerate Scavvies and noble Spyrers. Additional rules cover Pit Slaves and Wyres, Special Characters, Mentors, outlaw gangs, treacherous conditions, new scenarios, campaign events, Arbitrator-run games and a bestiary of the most dangerous denizens of the Underhive.

This is not a complete game. A copy of Necromunda is needed to use the contents of this box.

THE EMPEROR’S TAROT

The deck of Fate cards which comes with the Epic 40,000 game is an entertaining way of including the unpredictability of battle in your games. However, we thought we could add even more character if we did a deck specifically tailored to an individual army.

Enter the Emperor’s Tarot…

THE TAROT DECK

The full Emperor’s Tarot is a deck of 78 cards, used by his loyal followers to divine his will and aid in making important decisions. The cards themselves are elaborate works of art, each is a thin wafer of liquid crystal, lovingly hand-crafted by specialist scribe-artists of the Administratum. Each scribe labours his entire lifetime lavishly illuminating a single precious card. When laid out in their entirety the cards form a picture of the entire Imperium, its heroes and its foes. There is a card for each: the Warrior, the Space Marine, the Inquisitor, the Preacher, the Assassin, the Chaplain, the Astropath and the Judge, to name but a few. The most potent card is that of the Emperor himself. Conversely there are such horrors as the Daemon, the Traitor, the Warlock, the Mutant, the Heretic, the Hulk and the wild card of the pack, a card which is notoriously difficult to interpret, the Harlequin.

The picture on each card is never constant. The cards are psychically attuned to the strengthening and weakening of influences within the warp, but although the image shifts, perhaps due to the reader’s state of mind at the time, the basic meaning remains the same. Interpreting the mutable images is part of the art of understanding the cards.

No reading of the Tarot is ever undertaken lightly. A reading is a sacred ritual with strict codes of conduct that must be followed. The placing of the cards is highly significant, a circle of five arrayed about two central cards is the most basic reading. If more cards are used then further into the future can be seen, however, the information gleaned will become more vague and harder to interpret correctly. Cards mean different things depending on their position upon the table, their orientation and their relationship to other cards. The ramifications of a large reading can be thousand-fold and every reader might reach a different conclusion. For especially important events or dangerous threats to the Imperium, the High Lords of Terra themselves will look to the cards. The senate will convene to debate the cards’ meaning and each High Lord is advised by his own council of psykers and seers. The ensuing debates can last for weeks.

In the darkened chamber, its ancient walls shrouded by old tapestries, the wizened old seer sat behind a large stone table, awaiting his audience. Glow-candles illuminated the yellow smoke of incense burners. The cloying vapours of sacred herbs lay heavily across the chamber as his patrons arrived, a silent procession of five men, all dressed in the long ornate robes of the Ministorum. Pontifex-Urbis Judah spoke first.

"The cards are prepared, anointed with oils, thrice blessed before the image of Him on Earth, as you required. Make your reading." He passed a deck of cards, wrapped in silken cloth, to the old man who carefully shuffled them. Each card was a beautifully worked wafer-thin sliver of crystal. The Pontifex and his aides took their seats around the stone table.

First the seer took the card of the High Priest. The image was one of a robed figure carrying a hammer and a book, the picture’s face changed to that of the Pontifex himself. The seer placed it face up. "Your talsman I presume." It was common practice for high-ranking members of the Ecclesiarchy to take this card as their signifier, the talsman for whom the reading was to be made.

The seer’s laboured breathing became rhythmic as he attuned his senses, then with careful precision the old man laid seven cards face down on the table. Two inside a circle of five. The reading proper had begun.

In a trance he addressed the onlookers. "We stand alone facing the universe and seek the path of wisdom. Each card has its cosmic meaning, for humanity, for this world and for each individual present." The old seer began the reading with a prayer:

"I invoke thee, beloved Emperor. Infuse these cards that I might attain true insight of things hidden, to thy greater glory and the salvation of humanity." He turned the cards, one by one, studying the changing face of each one as he did. Finally he spoke.

"Your true self, the Heretic, but inverted." The Pontifex drew in a sharp breath and shuffled uneasily in his seat at the implications. The others looked unsettled too. "Do not judge the cards until all is revealed" warned the old seer. He turned the next card.

"Your perceived self, the Raiken. Two cards of the Discordia Arcana lying together..." the seer pronounced warily. Discordia – the Arcana of threats and enemies, around the table suspicions were further aroused and nervous glances exchanged. The Pontifex had recently preached against the dangers of isolation in the sight of the worshipping of four-armed gods by Thali’s native tribesmen. Yet still the Emperor was trying to warn those present. Beneath the table, the seer secretly eased off the safety-catch on his laspistol..."
THE EMPEROR’S WISDOM

The merits of the Emperor's Tarot are the subject of fierce theological debate within the Imperium. Many of the Emperor’s most dedicated servants rely upon the Tarot’s prescient powers to guide their actions. They believe the Tarot is a direct channel to the Emperor’s Will, that it is the Emperor himself who, through the medium of the Tarot, warns his loyal servants of threats to Mankind. Many wars have been fought on information interpreted from the Tarot, many disasters have been averted. For most this is enough evidence of the Divine nature of the Tarot, that despite being immolated within the Golden Throne on Earth, the Emperor maintains his omniscient vigilance over his subjects, scrying the tides of fate and relating his wishes through the turn of the cards.

For some the Tarot is superstitious nonsense, a diversion from the real business of ruling the Imperium. For others it is the reader himself, not the Emperor who controls the cards. Factions of the Ecclesiarchy believe the Tarot’s readings to be influenced by the Chaos Gods and that they serve as a channel for secret teachings to be handed down. Many shun their use altogether, others regard them as a dangerous heresy.

Despite these arguments the Tarot remains a popular tool among many of the Imperium’s most powerful men. Planetary Governors, Imperial Guard Colonels, Inquisitors (especially those of the secretive daemon hunting Ordo Malleus), Space Marine Commanders, Prefectus of the Administratum, Chancellors and Provost Marshals all regularly look to the Tarot cards’ prophetic powers for guidance.

USING THE EMPEROR’S TAROT FATE CARDS IN EPIC 40,000

In this issue we have provided a new deck of Fate cards for Epic 40,000, based on the Emperor’s Tarot. An Army of the Imperium may draw cards from the Emperor’s Tarot instead of using the normal Fate card deck from the Epic 40,000 game. Armies of the Imperium must draw from one deck or the other, not both.

The Emperor’s Tarot works exactly like the normal Fate deck except that the cards come in four Arcana. Each card can be used in one of two ways. Firstly as the power of the individual face card, which is given on the card itself, for example the Judge, the Space Marine or the Emperor. Alternatively, each card can also be used as its Arcana.

The Arcana, or suits, are as follows: Adeptio – the Arcana of heroes, servants and great deeds (blue), Discordia – the Arcana of enemies and threats (green), Mandatio – the Arcana of government, stability, wealth and leadership (purple), Excuteria – the Arcana of the unknown, exploration, the future and the mind (red).

As well as its face ability, each Arcana has another power associated with it, as follows:

Adeptio and Discordia Cards: Any cards of these Arcana can be used to re-roll a single close combat or firefights dice. Only one re-roll is allowed per close combat or firefight. Play the card after rolling the dice for a close combat or firefight for the first time.

Note: The Harlequin card is an exception to this, although it is of the Discordia Arcana it cannot be used as a re-roll like other Discordia cards; it is a wild card and has a special ability of its own (see the box on the right).

Mandatio and Excuteria: Any card of these Arcana can be used as a psychic blast. Pick an enemy unit within 30cm of one of your psykers. The unit takes a hit unless the opposing player nullifies the attack by playing a Psychic attack card of a higher value. Each card has its psychic blast value marked on it.

These powers are also summarised on the card although they have two powers each card can only be used once per battle. Each card also indicates when it can be played.

Example: The Assassin card is from the Adeptio Arcana. It can be played at any time to attack an enemy detachment commander or psyker – place a blast marker on the detachment. Alternatively it can be used as a re-roll, played after rolling the dice for a close combat or a firefight. Once the card has been used in either way then it is discarded.

THE HARLEQUIN

This card cannot be used as a re-roll like other Discordia cards, instead The Harlequin can be used as a wild card. The Harlequin can be played at any time, allowing the Imperial player to take a card at random from the unused Tarot deck. He must play this new card immediately, using it either as the face card or its Arcana. If this new card cannot be used because of the battlefield situation or because it must be played at a certain time, then it must be discarded and The Harlequin is wasted.
In Warhammer Quest you take the part of a brave adventurer, exploring the danger-hidden catacombs that lie deep beneath the Old World, fighting hideous Monsters for fabulous treasures and undying glory. Further adventures are detailed in the Lair of the Orc Lord and Catacombs of Terror packs which introduce new Monsters and even more perils. In addition, the Warrior packs contain nine new heroes, each with unique special abilities, skills and weapons. Dare you face the challenge of Warhammer Quest?

WARNING! Adventure and Warrior packs contain lead which may be harmful if chewed or swallowed.

Citadel Miniatures are not recommended for children under 14 years of age.

MAIDENS OF BATTLE

This month sees the release of Repanse de Lyoness and the Sorceresses of the Bretonnian army. Bretonnia has a grand tradition of chivalry and honour wherein the menfolk and Knights of the land are duty bound to protect the women from harm, laying down their own lives, if necessary, to ensure the safety of the maidens.

This means for the most part that women do not, and are never expected to, fight. During times of war their role is to provide inspiration and encouragement to the men who ride off to do battle. Bretonnians take this idea very seriously, and ingrained in their culture is the belief that the favours of a maiden can and do affect a warrior’s prowess in combat. So powerful is the Bretonnians’ faith in this tradition that a token of esteem, or even just a kindly word from a woman before he enters the fray can turn the most faint hearted Knight into a bloody slaughterer capable of felling many foes.

This code of chivalry has its roots in the legend of the Lady of the Lake, a goddess to the people of Bretonnia and the embodiment of all that is good and virtuous. The greatest quest a Knight can undertake is the quest for the grail, upon which the Questing Knight seeks an audience with the Lady of the Lake herself. To attain such an audience he must first prove himself worthy by facing many perils, and righting many wrongs. Only then can he be deemed ready to meet the Lady of the Lake, who will appear to him in a vision. If he is judged worthy then he may drink from the grail itself, and thus he will become a member of the purest of all the orders of Knights, the Grail Knights.

However, there are exceptions to the passive role played by most Bretonnian women, and if there is one thing the men of Bretonnia understand it is the power and strength of the women they protect. Bretonnian men vehemently defend the maidens not because they underestimate their female charges, but because they value them as highly as they regard their personal honour.

The most notable example of a Bretonnian woman who actually accompanies the Knights into combat is the Fay Enchantress, Morgiana Le Fay, a practitioner of the magical arts blessed with unique talents in the field of sorcery. Morgiana has proven to be the inspiration behind many a young woman taking up the mantle of the Sorceress and riding into battle to unleash their own arsenal of spells upon the foes of Bretonnia.

Another famous maiden who is more than capable of holding her own in a fight is Repanse de Lyoness. Repanse was a young peasant girl, not yet past her teens, when she took up the armour of a fallen Knight, fashioned herself a banner from a tapestry, and obtained a sword whilst Couronne was besieged by an army of Chaos. She managed to rally the beleaguered defenders, and since that fateful day she has won great renown and become a much respected general and Knight in her own right.

Over the next few pages you will see some of the thoughts and work that went into sculpting and painting Repanse de Lyoness. We’ve also included a 1,500 point sample Bretonnian army, led by Repanse. Our Mail Order department is currently running a special deal on this army, which you can find in the Mail Order section at the back of the magazine.
As many of you will no doubt recall, figure sculptor Michael Perry was involved in a serious accident last year, in which he lost his right arm. Michael has since come back to work, learning to use his left hand to sculpt.

Repanse de Lyonesse is Michael’s first Citadel model since the accident, and was started just before Christmas, though he has sculpted about twenty other models in the intervening time. Michael says that a miniature of the size and detail of Repanse de Lyonesse was probably a bit of an ambitious project to undertake as his first Citadel model sculpted using his left hand. But sculpt her he did, and here you can see for yourself the impressive results of his perseverance.

There are one or two exciting features to immediately note about the miniature. The first of these is the sculpted detail on the barding, which picks out her horse from the rest. Also note how her page-boy style hair emphasises her youthfulness. At the stage of drawing up concept sketches for the miniature, Michael had originally envisioned her with long, flowing locks and a very feminine look, but this didn’t quite gel with the background that had been written for the character. He went back to the drawing board, literally, and eventually came up with the design you see here. If you’ve ever read the story of Joan of Arc then you will understand what Repanse de Lyonesse is all about, and this design captures that sort of feel perfectly.

In the end, it took Michael about a month to finish sculpting this miniature. He says that this is about two thirds of his working speed before the accident. Phew! But he’s getting faster all the time, and now has a purpose built limb to help him with designing miniatures.

Repanse de Lyonesse was painted by Scandinavian supremo Torben Schnoor, who had to pull out all the stops to create something special for this particular miniature. All in all it took Torben nearly a fortnight of solid work to achieve the unique paint scheme you see on the model pictured here.

There are a number of quite individual touches that have gone into this paint job to really make Repanse stand out from the rest of the pack. For example, note the wood grain on the butt of her lance which Torben has actually painted onto the smooth surface of this part of the miniature. Repanse herself, you will have noticed, is wearing a suit of gilded plate mail armour, which is another touch identifying her as something different from the rest of the Knights around her. Her face is very pale, almost to the point of being wan to create that youthful look. Like Michael, Torben initially attempted to get a more feminine look on the miniature, using strong eye shadow and a bright red colour for the lips, but this idea was rejected as not being in character with the legend of Repanse de Lyonesse.

The horse also has a very individual paint scheme. Notice, for example, the different coloured socks on its forelegs. The muzzle of the animal is also different to the rest of the horse’s colouring, being lighter and somewhat fleshier than its coat, an effect which was achieved by mixing vermin fur, the base coat for the rest of the animal, with white and a little bit of red. As Torben explains, you don’t get uniform colours in nature so it’s worthwhile taking that little bit of extra time over cavalry mounts to make them look realistic.

For heraldry you will observe that the lions on the barding are brightly coloured gold on a dark blue background, which is a classic heraldic combination.
REPSANSE DE LYONESSE

Repans de Lyonesse won fame as the dreaded Damaoiseille de Guerre who rallied the battered armies of Bretonnia during the kingdom’s darkest hour. This was when King Louis the Brave was slain in battle before Couronne fighting a vast Chaos horde invading Bretonnia from beyond the Sea of Claws. Louis’ army was all but destroyed. Couronne was besieged and to make matters worse the king’s heir was still a child unable to lead the nation.

Chaos raiders spread out across the land burning and destroying. Everywhere Knights were hacked down as they bravely defied impossible odds. At this dark moment, amid the smoking ruins of a small village in remote Lyonesse, Repans saw the Lady of the Lake. The Lady appeared saying “Repans, Repans, rid my land of these foul foes, for they do offend me with their presence!”

Repans was no more than seventeen years of age, a humble shepherdess who was devoutly religious. Inspired by her vision she donned armour that she found on a slain Knight and grabbed the reins of a terrified warhorse which was running loose. She broke open the reliquary of the village grail chapel and took up the sword she found within it. Snatching a tapestry hung on the wall she fastened it to a lance and rode forth to rally the disheartened Knights of Lyonesse.

When the retreating Knights saw a mere damsel bravely setting off to do battle with the mighty warriors of Chaos, and one who was undoubtedly favoured by the Lady of the Lake, they were shamed and felt honour bound to follow her to death or glory! While the ramparts of Couronne were cracking under the impact of the battering rams of the Chaos Lord, word was brought of a Bretonnian army approaching fast and trampling beneath their hooves any foe in their path.

As the great doors were about to give way, the banner of the dread Damaoiseille appeared leading a great host of Knights arrayed in a single lance formation. They clef their way through the Chaos ranks shattering the Chaos army until Repans was face to face with the Chaos Lord himself. When he raised his great sword above his grimacing visage he was momentarily dazzled by Repans’s radiant aura, and she beheaded him with a single sword stroke!

Couronne was saved and the remnants of the enemy were pursued to the sea and justly put to death. In gratitude, Louis the Young bestowed upon Repans not only all the honours of knighthood but also the Ducedom of Lyonesse.

REPSANSE DE LYONESSE

310 points including equipment and magic items

Your army may be led by Repans de Lyonesse. If you decide to do this she replaces the General in the main army list and also the Battle Standard Bearer since she fulfils both roles!

PROFILE

| Repans | 4 6 6 4 4 3 6 4 9 |
| Bretonian | 8 3 0 3 3 1 3 1 5 |

Weapons/Armour: Repans is armed with the Sword of Lyonesse, heavy armour and a shield

Rides: Repans rides a barded Bretonian Warhorse.

Knights Virtues: Repans is a Knight and thus has the Knight’s Virtue. She also has the Virtue of Devotion.

SPECIAL RULES

The Halo of Maidenly Wrath

The power of the Lady of the Lakes shines from Repans like a halo. Her sword and armour glow with the brilliant light of divine retribution. Her eyes shine with terrible judgement and her voice cries forth damnation upon her enemies. Repans causes fear as described in the Psychology section of the Warhammer rulebook.

MAGIC ITEMS

Repans carries two magic items, the Sword of Lyonesse and the Fleur de Lys Banner.

The Fleur de Lys Banner

Magic Standard ........................................... 100 points

This banner bears the fleur de lis of the Lady of the Lake and was taken from the walls of the same grail chapel where Repans found the Sword of Lyonesse. The touch of the Lady has made the banner so bright and shining as the day it was stitched by the maidens of Lyonesse.

The standard is the army’s battle standard, and all the usual rules for battle standards apply. In addition, it has the power to draw magic from the enemy and to turn it against them. In each magic phase, including the magic phase of the enemy player, the Bretonnian player may remove one random wind of magic card from his opponent’s hand. This card is then discarded. If the card is a power card or Total Power then the Bretonnian player adds +1 to the combat result of all combats fought in the following combat phase. If the Drain Magic card is drawn then the magic phase is ended immediately. If any other card is drawn there is no further effect.

Sword of Lyonesse

Magic Weapon ............................................. 50 points

The Lady of the Lake led Repans to a grail chapel where she took up this ancient warblade – the sword of a devout and honourable Knight of olden times. The Lady guided Repans well, for the weapon has great power over enemy magic. The Sword of Lyonesse has the power to defy all magic items except magic weapons. The magic items of any enemy models in base contact with the wielder will not work, unless they are magic weapons in which case they work normally. The sword will therefore negate the magical powers of all wards and magic armours.

SAMPLE 1500 POINT BRETONNIAN ARMY

The "Chevaliers de Lyonesse", listed to the left, is a good example of the type of army you can build around a general, providing an overall theme for your collection.

The army has been designed with the sorts of troops likely to be attracted to the banner of Repanse de Lyonesse in mind. The most significant block of troops in the army are the Chevaliers de la Damaiselle de Guerre, a sizeable unit of Knights Errant. The Knights Errant of Bretonnia are young gallants setting out for the first time on the path of honour and self discovery. If there is one thing which binds these men, aside from their reckless valour, it is their allegiance to anything which is of the Lady of the Lake. If they properly honour her this will lead to the next stage of their development as Knights. It would therefore follow that such Knights would strive to devote themselves to the cause of Repanse de Lyonesse, an individual through whom the spirit of the Lady of the Lake burns like a fiery beacon to the faithful. The regiment is led in battle by Pierre d’Arden.

The next unit of Knights is the Defenders of the Fleur de Lys, a regiment of Knights of the Realm. These are Repanse’s loyal retainers, the flower of Lyonesse’s chivalry, all willing to follow the banner of Repanse de Lyonesse into whatever peril it may lead. These are the noble sons of the Dukedom of Lyonesse and like the Knights Errant they are convinced that the spirit which moves within Repanse de Lyonesse comes from the Lady of the Lake, giving them a holy purpose in battle.

As she was once a commoner herself, Repanse de Lyonesse is regarded affectionately by peasants, many of whom are eager to rally to the Fleur de Lys. The Bowmen and Spearmen of Lyonesse are the peasant levy drawn from her Dukedom of Lyonesse, and are only too glad to serve their powerful Duchess, even though she is a woman!

Henri le Massif is a Grail Knight Hero expert in the ways of slaying great monsters. His Grail Virtue makes him indomitable in the face of the most fearsome abomination, which combined with the Virtue of Valour have lead to him developing the necessary skills required to defeat the biggest and strongest of foes. Henri is a formidable challenge for even the most dangerous creatures in Warhammer, such as Dragons and Greater Daemons. To complete the monster slayer package he is armed with the Sword of Heroes, just to make sure those monstrous foes stay down when he hits them. Like the other Knights in the army, Henri has placed himself in the service of Repanse in recognition of her strong associations with the Lady of the Lake.

Finally there is the Sorceress, Chantelle de la Nuit, who has chosen to aid the army of Repanse over and above the army of a male Lord. Bretonnian wizards are usually the daughters of Bretonnian noble families because the noble sons all aspire to be great Knights. For them knighthood and the search for the grail are the only honourable pursuits. Because of this, the study of magic falls to the daughters, who are traditionally schooled in the ways of magic from an early age at the Empire’s College of Magic in Altdorf.

This is the sort of history it is always worthwhile creating for your army, especially if you intend to play campaign games. It makes for far more interesting battles, with more than just a roster sheet at stake.
CHEVALIERS DE LYONESSE

Knights are the mainstay of any Bretonian army, and the Chevaliers de Lyonesse are certainly no exception to this.

To the left you can see a regiment of Knights of the Realm. With their unique Lance formation, there is little that can stand before the charge of the Bretonian cavalry. In battle, these Knights will form the main strike force of the army, capable of breaking and routing most enemy units with ease.

The Bowmen of Lyonesse (below), led by Jean Claude Sarre, provide valuable and effective missile support for the Knights with their Arrowhead formation. This is particularly important to an army which is prohibited war machines.

Although this model is not actually part of the Chevaliers de Lyonesse, it is worth mentioning that Sorceresses on foot are also available for your army. Whilst a mounted Sorceress can be part of the spearhead of your assault, a powerful Sorceress on foot can also be employed to provide a stable bulwark for the commoners advancing behind the cavalry.

The Spearmen of Lyonesse answer to René des Cartes, and are a useful screen for defending the Bowmen. Big infantry units like these are particularly good at meeting enemy cavalry charges. With their spears and large rank bonus, they can hold against any but the most determined of attacks.

The Sorceress below, sculpted by Brian Nelson, is used in our army to represent Chantelle de la Nuit. In contrast to the complex heraldry of the Knights, Eavy Metal team member Stuart Thomas has painted her with a simple, strong, colour scheme.

Above is a Henri le Massif, a valiant Hero of the Grail Knight Order. Henri’s combination of virtues and magic items makes him particularly well suited to taking on very large, tough enemy monsters or characters. The Virtue of Valour allows him to re-roll any failed to hit rolls against enemies with a higher Strength characteristic than his own Strength of 4. This makes for a deadly combination with the Sword of Heroes, which adds +3 to his Strength and inflicts D3 wounds against any foe with a Toughness greater than 5.

In battle, Henri will challenge the most horrific of beasts, strong in the knowledge that the spirit of the Lady of the Lake is with him.

BLOODSCENT

Think you've seen it all? This new scenario for Warhammer 40,000 looks at first as if it's pitting the Space Marines against their age-old enemies - the Orks. But don't be fooled, there's Tyranids lurking in them there hills!

ODLOG'S FREEBOOTERS

In the years following the near catastrophic push across the Eastern Fringe by the Tyranids of Hive Fleet Behemoth, an exceptionally brutal and flamboyant Ork Freebooter called Odlog Blackskar gathered together a motley assortment of thieves, vagabonds and rascals from his race to form Odlog's Freebooters. Ever the opportunist, Captain Odlog found the systems left badly shaken and terrorised by the Tyranid attack made easy prey for his piracy.

Eventually, in the time-honoured Ork fashion, Blackskar annexed a drifting space hulk and made it his home, naming it Gargulk Dur Odlog. So it was that for the next eight years Captain Odlog carried out a succession of raids on any worlds the warp tide washed him up on, looting colonies and razing cities to the ground. The Freebooter Kaptain caught the attention of some of the Imperium's more vocal Governors, whose worlds were by far the most common target for his excesses, but they could never pin him down. By the time an effective counterstroke could be organised, he had disappeared back into the concealing flux of warp space. Not surprisingly, quite a few of these Imperial luminaries began to demand the attention of the Adeptus Astartes to deal with this particularly tricky problem, but the matter was considered a local matter, and no aid was forthcoming.

Odlog made himself a fortune in tea and was the envy of many an aspiring Freebooter, but in the end he got sloppy and made what was to prove a fatal error in judgement.

He stayed in one place too long...

THE VERDAN SYSTEM

On the Northernmost fringe of the galactic spiral arm which is home to both Terra and the Blood Angels' world of Baal, lies a binary star system known as Verdan. Of the seventeen satellite worlds, eleven are habitable and ten are colonised by settlers of the Imperium. The eleventh planet is a death world called Extremis which has yet to be tamed, the indigenous flora and fauna having proven thoroughly hostile.

However, the remaining colonised planets are extremely profitable in terms of both mining and agriculture. Indeed, the twin stars of Verdan give a temperature and humidity range somewhere between temperate and tropical across most of the system, and most crops can be harvested two or three times a year. The people of the Verdan system were content with the bounty of their fertile worlds, where they prospered by the grace of the Emperor. It was into this paradise that Gargulk Dur Odlog rolled and began a system wide sweep of the farming and mining communities he found in the Verdan system.

BATTLE FOR VERDAN III

Clearing out such a broad area of space with so many worlds and so much booty would be no quick task for Captain Odlog and his Freebooters. In the past he had always just collected what he could when faced with a large choice, and sensibly made good his escape. But these planets were home to wealth and resources beyond his wildest imaginings. Greed got the better of Odlog and he started a pillaging spree which lasted an entire month. During this time the Verdan worlds’ Planetary Defence Forces managed to muster some semblance of resistance to Odlog’s raids, and alert the Blood Angels Space Marines on Baal of their predicament.
Lead units of Blood Angels are attacked from all sides by an overwhelming force of Tyranids.

By chance, the Blood Angels’ battle barge Exsanguinator of the Unclean was within Verdan space at the time of the distress call, returning from quelling a revolt in a neighbouring system. Within the space of twenty-four hours the vast Blood Angels ship arrived on the scene of a ferocious battle above the atmosphere of Verdan III. The intervention of the Space Marines quickly turned the tide of battle, and Odlog’s fleet was routed. The Blood Angels’ cruiser Tycho’s Revenge poured shot after shot into Odlog’s flagship, crippling her engines. With his vessel disintegrating around him, Odlog decided that the time had come for action. Picking up his chief Mek by the scruff of his neck, he dragged him over to a viewport. “Get us onto dat planet. NOW!” Odlog growled. “Or you’ll be eatin’ bolta shells.” He waved a large combi-weapon under the Mek’s nose to emphasise his point and the obedient Ork disappeared through a rent in the wall to do as he was ordered. There was a pause, then with a huge explosion the entire bridge of the hulk was blasted towards the planet, just as the overloaded plasma drives vapourised the rest of Gargulk Dur Odlog. Then, as they plummeted towards the surface of Extremis like a fiery comet, the still-smoking form of the Mek reappeared, a large grin on his face. “Dat OK?”

Aboard Tycho’s Revenge, the Blood Angels Commander watched Odlog’s escape. “Second Battle Company” was all he needed to say to launch the pursuit.
THE PREY

The Blood Angels made planetfall some three miles south of the spot where sensors indicated that Odlog’s bridge had come down, and battled their way through the dense undergrowth to the crash site. The Blood Angels landing party were singularly unprepared for the horror they encountered on that green, seave world.

The acute senses of the Space Marines noted immediately the unnatural silence pervading the jungle. Their initial impression was that the crash had scared the wildlife from the surrounding area, but the absolute lack of sound seemed too complete to be so easily explained. Warily, the Blood Angels continued their mission through the dense undergrowth...

All things considered, the Ork “vessel” had executed a pretty good landing, showing only minor scratches on the hull above where it lay half buried in the soil. The only bulkhead door above ground level lay open and the Space Marine Scouts tentatively approached it to assess the situation. The interior of the Ork vessel was a charnel house of severed limbs and heads, with a macabre nest of entrails and thick, green Ork blood painting the walls, ceiling, and floor. Upon a more detailed reconnaissance of the surrounding area, Odlog’s shattered carcass was discovered. The final resting place of the infamous Freebooter was an ignominious one, dangling upside-down from a tree about thirty yards away from the landing site. Captain Odlog’s dense skull was punctured in four different places and his cranial cavity had been emptied of its contents, such as they were.

FLIGHT FROM THE SWARM

Having secured the area, and assured their enemies were all disposed of, the Blood Angels wasted no more time. They decided to make haste back to their Thunderhawk Gunships and launch a proper investigation into the strange turn of events on Extremis. It was then that the first waves of Tyranids struck.

Historically, the only account of this incident comes from the testimony of Captain Perdo of the 2nd Company, who was the only Space Marine to make it back to the Thunderhawk alive. Subsequent investigations revealed Genestealer infestation and Tyranid activity throughout the whole northern part of the sector. Fortunately, the Tyranids of this minor invasion, code-named Hive Fleet Leviathan by the Administrator Xenobiologist, were dispersed and poorly organised. Seemingly the Hive Mind’s tactics involved taking over uninhabited worlds and then attempting to grow in strength in order to launch a more telling assault on the human population of the sector when the time was right. It has been surmised that the Tyranids were found this far away from their normal haunts on the Eastern Fringe as a sort of advance force, deployed to soften the way for the immense Hive Fleet Kraken which was still over two centuries away from its initial assaults.

Second Company Devastators, supported by a Dreadnought, attempt to carve through the enemy.
Loping stealthily along the jungle floor, its long, low stride cutting the distance effortlessly, the hunter’s passage left barely a ripple in its wake. All the large animal life in this part of the vast rain forest had already been assimilated into the greater whole of its kind. Ravenous jaws and mandibles having already accounted for the extinction of several thousand species on this world alone.

There had been a great disturbance in the forest and the Lictor acted because it knew instinctively what it must do. Unlike many others of the Tyranid race, the Lictor was capable of acting independently of the Hive Mind. Its purpose within the macro organism of the Tyranids was gathering intelligence and scouting for the swarm. This required a level of initiative, which made the Lictor a singularly dangerous opponent.

Guttural voices sounded harshly between the boughs. The hunter was nearing its destination. Never breaking its run, the Lictor’s legs momentarily hunched behind it, then uncoiled with the force of hydraulic rams, propelling the beast toward the lower branches of a tree. Slimy, chitin tipped hooks erupted from the intercostal spaces in the Lictor’s rib cage and anchored it high up on the trunk of the mighty tree. Disappearing into the branches with barely a whisper, photoreceptive cells in the Lictor’s toughened shell changed the creature’s hue to blend perfectly with its background, while it paused to consider the scene confronting it.

In a scorchered crater, amidst a pile of withered undergrowth and broken branches, was a machine, which meant that a sentient enemy was present. One of the creatures had already left the craft, and was barring gruff orders up at a portal on the thing’s side. Others peered out of the entrance in a dazed fashion. The Lictor’s purpose was clear. The creatures must not survive long enough to report the presence of the Hive Mind. They must be assimilated forthwith to discover what they knew. The hunter focused on the vast, brooding racial memory of the Hive Mind. These creatures had been encountered many times before, sometimes at great cost. They were resilient and adaptable, but poorly organised and easily vanquished in small numbers.

The Lictor darted forth from its concealment amidst the leaves and branches like some terrible, predatory insect. The green-skinned creature in front of the machine turned tail and fled. It was of no consequence, the hunter knew the creature would not get far, since the Lictor had already emitted a powerful pheromone signal to others of its kind in the area. The Hive Mind was already linking the Lictor with another of its species in close proximity to the clearing. The meat things inside the metal vessel were panicked and unco-ordinated. Four of them were trying to force their way out of the portal all at the same time when the Lictor struck with lightning speed and juggernaut force. Its taloned feet clung to the side of the portal whilst the huge, scythe-like upper limbs forced the hapless prey back into their vessel. The soft creatures howled briefly with agony and terror as venomous, razor sharp chitin went to work on them. Then silence, but for the soft, wet sounds of feeding.

Lurking just beyond the fringe of the crash site, a second killer lay in ambush. Through a combination of chemical signals received from its kindred and transmissions emanating from the awesome telepathic matrix of the Hive Mind, the newcomer knew exactly where to arrive on the scene. The garishly attired leader of the group of creatures charged headlong into the dense vegetation. As it came screaming towards the Lictor, the hunter launched its wickedly sharp flesh hooks at the green skinned escapee. The muscle spasm which projected the flesh hooks was powerful enough to punch them clean through the carapace the creature wore and transfixed them through its shoulders. Still alive, and suffering beyond its worst nightmares, the enemy was yanked off its feet and catapulted forward as the Lictor drew in the sinews linking it to its prey.

The Lictor dangled the weakly struggling organism in front of itself, as if to regard the food, as a connoisseur might inspect a delicacy before devouring it. In desperation, driven half insane with fear despite its pain, the creature’s feeble, thrashing attempts to reach the weapon at its belt seemingly held the Lictor in a state of fascination. Green blood leaked thickly from the twin puncture wounds on the Ork’s shoulders, and the Lictor was aware of the warmth seeping along the length of its flesh hooks. The hunter’s sharp eyes noted how the prey struggled so violently against its inevitable assimilation, and subsequent loss of individuality, that it caused itself further damage. The cradle of bones wrapped around the horny chitin of the flesh hooks grated with every abrupt movement of the prey, eventually rupturing an artery on one side, which changed the slow, glutinous leak of fluid to a fine green spray. The blood-spattered hunter wasted no more time, and, before the consciousness departed from the creature’s body forever, the Lictor’s writhing mass of feeding tentacles pierced the prey’s skull to suck out its essence. The knowledge contained within the Ork’s brain would eventually be subsumed by the vast intellect of the Tyranid Hive Mind when the Lictor was in turn assimilated after its task on this world was complete.
Tyranids represent one of the most dangerous threats the Imperium has ever encountered. Utterly alien carnivores from a galaxy beyond our own, the Tyranids’ evolution has made them unlike anything previously fought by the Imperium.

Above: Zoanthropes have evolved impressive psychic capabilities, at the expense of their physical bodies.

Right: It is not unusual for swarms of Hormagaunts to erupt from the soil of planets which have suffered Tyranid incursions weeks after the situation has been quelled!

Above: Tall, imposing Tyranid Warriors seem to represent the oldest strain of the Tyranid race, and are thought to be the template from which all subsequent Tyranid species are derived. Tyranid Warriors carry a wide range of bio-weapons into battle.

Above: The powerful talons of the Genestealers are capable of making a mockery of even the most formidable armour the Imperium has to offer.
Above: Hulking Carnifexes pack the power of a Dreadnought into their living bodies.

Right: The abominations known as the Hive Tyrants are amongst the most fearsome opponents encountered by man in his conquest of the galaxy.

Left: Grotesque Biovors, with their Spore Mine bio-ammunition, act as living artillery pieces for the armies of the Hive Fleet.

Right: Gargoyles vomit burning sheets of incendiary bile over their unfortunate enemies with the deadly flamespurt, a symbiotic weapon linked to the Gargoyles' own digestive tract.

Left: Tyranids, the most common creature of the Tyranid swarms, wield a variety of bio-weapons including the standard armaments of a fleshbeater, the long range spike rifle, and the barbed strangler web for close quarters fighting.
There are lots of ways of modelling jungle areas for your battlefield including using plastic aquarium plants (often weirdly coloured which is great for alien vegetation), lichen from model shops or your garden, or at a pinch just using pieces of green paper, felt or cloth to mark the edges. Easy really.

ESCAPE FROM EXTREMIS

To play this scenario you should ideally have about eighty per cent of your tabletop battlefield covered by jungle terrain. Now this is an awful lot, and few of us have that much beautifully modelled jungle available. However, there are lots of other ways you can make jungle for this battle. I’ve listed some of these in the box above.

Like the historical account given above, the Blood Angels must escape the horde of Tyranids, breaking through the alien battle line and reaching the safety of their Thunderhawk Gunships.

DEPLOYMENT

Use normal deployment zones of 12" in from the board edges and 12" on to play this scenario. However, neither side is allowed to deploy Infiltrators any further forward from their battle line than half the table distance, ie 24" on. This battle represents an incident which occurred in a very short time frame, so neither side will have had any time to prepare strategies involving such fine tuning as Infiltration.

BLOOD ANGELS FORCES

There are no limits to the amount of points you play in this game, you can have as many or as few as you wish. The one restriction, however, is that your forces must be drawn from the ranks of the 2nd and 10th Companies of Blood Angels, so check your Codex Angels of Death before picking your army to see what troops are available.

BROODS OF LEVIATHAN

There are no hard and fast rules for your choice of broods, Support and Individuals in this scenario, simply use the guidelines from Codex Tyranids to create your swarm. The swarm you create should be of equal points to the Blood Angels army you are fighting. Then create an equal sized swarm of reserves which will turn up during the course of the battle, see the Special Rules section below for details on deploying this reserve force.

BLOOD ANGELS MISSION OBJECTIVES

The Blood Angels have to exit the table edge on the Tyranid deployment zone to escape. Each unit that manages to escape in this way gains two victory points. The battle ends when the last surviving unbroken Space Marine unit exits the table, and victory points are then counted up.

TYRANID OBJECTIVES

The Tyranids have to stop the Space Marines escaping at all costs, in order to prevent the Blood Angels reporting the Hive Mind’s activities to others of their kind. This is of course achieved by consuming them to add to Leviathan’s gene pool.

Each Blood Angels unit destroyed or broken at the end of the game adds one victory point to the Tyranid total.

Sudden death victory condition: If all the Space Marines have been destroyed or broken then the game is automatically a Tyranid victory.

Likewise, if all the Tyranids are destroyed or broken, then the Blood Angels may make good their escape and therefore win the game.

SPECIAL RULES

Once per turn, the Tyranids may bring on a reserve unit at any table edge except their own. They may not do this on the first turn of the game, and they may not bring them on within 16" of an enemy unit. These units may move, charge and shoot as normal.
Necromunda, a world of giant hive cities and glittering spires crouched upon a dark underworld of anarchy and violence. In the subterranean depths, the hard-bitten survivors of Necromunda's many terrors stalk each other through crumbling domes and ancient machines, fighting and dying for the spoils of a derelict civilization.

In Necromunda rival players control gangs of fighters who must battle it out amongst a three-dimensional tabletop landscape of ruined buildings, soaring gantries and walkways.
INFERNO!
Tales of Fantasy & Adventure

Issue Zero
IN CASE YOU hadn’t noticed, you’ve just turned over a White Dwarf page the like of which has never been seen before. The next fourteen pages make up an extra-special White Dwarf feature: an exclusive Issue Zero of Inferno!

It heralds the arrival of a whole new part of the Games Workshop hobby. For years, we have all known that Warhammer short stories, technical manuals, comic strips and so on would be brilliant, if only we could get them right. So far, we have been so busy designing new models and games, opening stores, getting White Dwarf right, sorting out Games Day (I could go on, it’s a very long list, and we have been very busy) that none of these exciting things have happened. Not exactly the way we wanted them, anyway, and as you know by now, we are sticklers for detail.

Enter Inferno!

There are no rules in Inferno! No, literally, there are no rules...

Inferno! is going to be a 68-page book, slightly smaller than our army books (mostly so I don’t get confused) and packed with stories from the worlds of Warhammer and Warhammer 40,000. Stories about mighty heroes, impossible adventures, historical events, important places, fabulous myths, famous battles, powerful objects, mystical artifacts and anything else exciting which comes to mind. Also, by ‘stories’, I don’t just mean words on a page – a tale can be told by a comic strip, a series of maps and charts, or even by a single illustration. In Inferno!, we use all of these forms to bring our worlds to life.

Anyway, I could go on at great length in an attempt to explain all about Inferno!, but it’s far easier to show you some examples of the sorts of features you can expect in the first issue proper.

Everything on the next few pages has been specially commissioned for this preview issue, so it’s not even as though I’m being a cheapskate and shamelessly extracting chunks of issue 1 for a quick plug!

So welcome to a special White Dwarf preview issue of Inferno! Issue 1 will be in the shops very soon.

Andy Jones
Supreme Commander,
Inferno!
Captain Morgan (illustrated) leads the Dark Angels on a lightning-strike into the bowels of a space hulk. This behemoth lies poised to hurl itself back into the cold void of the warp at any moment! As if imminent death in warp space were not enough, the Dark Angels have the added “inconvenience” of an Inquisitorial presence – not to mention the horrors which lurk in the darkness of the hulk itself.

Logan Lubera and the chaps at Frozen Ink studios in Canada have created an amazing nine-page Dark Angels comic strip for issue 1 of Inferno!

THE TERROR OF DEATH, FEATURING CAPTAIN MORGAN OF THE DARK ANGELS, STARTS IN ISSUE 1 OF INFERNO!

RUNNING, HE HAD to keep running. The snow flew up in flurries around his feet as the peasant raced on through the night. The biting cold forgotten and the bundle of firewood he had been carrying now discarded, his only thoughts were of the hounds baying behind him. Above the choking, tearing rasp of his breath in his ice-scoured throat, he could hear them panting and barking. Muffled by the snow and trees, their howls took on an echoing, almost ethereal quality. He dared not turn to snatch a fleeting glance of his pursuers for fear of what he might see if he did. He did not know what they were or where they came from, and he did not care. He only knew that he could not let them catch him.

Through the dark silhouettes of tall pines he saw the dim lantern light shining in the window of his hovel. Then his foot snagged in an exposed tree-root hidden under the snow. A searing pain blazed in his ankle and he fell. In panic, the man tried to scramble to his feet but as he did so his torn ankle all but screamed out in protest. Terror helping him to ignore the pain, he staggered on. With every limping step, shelter from the cruel winter night and the dark horrors it held came ever closer. Only another sixty yards and he would be safe. But with every desperate step the snarling of the hounds got nearer.

He had not realising how near until he was suddenly tugged backwards with a fierce jerk as the first of them sank its claws into the calf of his leg. Crying out, he landed spread-eagled in the freezing snow, the breath knocked out of him. The rest of the pack were upon him before he could spit the snow from his mouth to draw another frozen breath. In a few moments of snarling savagery it was over.

As quickly as they had fallen on the man, the hounds tossed the body aside and bounded off again into the night. The pack was closely followed by the masters of the hunt. Flaming hooves and iron-shod feet trampled the corpse into the hard ground, white turning to crimson with a hiss of steam as the man’s hot blood soaked into the sulfured snow.

The Hounds of Winter were abroad once more.

WITH A CRASH, the inn door was flung open and a chill gust of wind drove the warmth from the room.

‘Shut the door!’ a gruff voice shouted from a table of hard-bitten adventuring types. Midwinter’s Eve on the fringes of the Northern Wastes was as bitterly cold as any of the Weather Sages of Erengrad could predict and outside was where the inn’s clientele wanted it kept that night. With a resounding boom, the portal was sealed again by a second gust of wind and the air inside the snug was still once more.

Everything about the inn told its age. Huge oak beams the size of whole trees formed a bracing structure, which supported the centuries-old, filth-coated rafters; around the beams, walls thick enough to withstand a besieging army had been build. Something about the huge stones gave the impression that they had been here long before mortal men had decided to build an inn in this inhospitable place. The bar took up most of one wall and on the opposite side of the hall-like room a fire blazed in the vast stone fireplace. Between the bar and the fireplace were tables, benches and stools, most of which were occupied by a combination of local villagers, enjoying a warmer atmosphere than that which they could find at home, Kisleite soldiers having completed their patrols of these dangerous lands, and hired swords making the most of the money they had earned and always on the look-out to make some more.

'We haven’t a moment to lose! Barricade the doors and windows! Arm yourselves!' the newcomer shouted above the hubbub.

Casually, with feigned disinterest, the party of adventurers seated in the centre of the bar turned to see who had disturbed their quiet drink in the warm. Standing just over the threshold was an old man, his age-lined face testimony to a life of hardship but also of great inner strength. A thick mane of white hair fell back from his forehead and his wide jaw was buried beneath a luxurious beard. He gripped a staff like a tree-branch in one great hand, and around his broad shoulders rested the hide of some unfortunate bear, its claws now pinned by a clasp about the stranger’s neck.

'They’re coming I tell you! We must prepare for battle!' ‘Calm yourself, old man, calm yourself,’ black-haired Torber Badenov said, rising from the table of adventurers, his huge frame blocking the old man’s view of the fireplace. ‘Why don’t you have a drink and let us get on with ours?’ ‘There is no time for that! Do you not know what night it is?’ ‘Of course we do,’ Torber retorted. ‘Not all of us are suffering from dementia as yet. It’s Midwinter’s Eve.’ ‘But not just any Midwinter’s Eve. Tonight is also the Conjunction of the Two Moons!’

Oran Scarfen, a gaunt, toothy warrior whose rodent-like features and spiky moustache almost belied any human heritage, turned and sneered in the vague direction of the newcomer. ‘What’s he ranting about now?

‘The Conjunction of the Two Moons only happens once every three hundred years – when both Moon and Dark Moon are directly opposed to each other, on Midwinter’s Eve, dead on midnight, their fell powers pulling equally upon this world.’ ‘So what does that have to do with us?’ Torber asked flippantly. ‘It is upon us tonight! Do you not know the legend?’ ‘What legend?’ ‘Oh,’ the stranger wailed, despair cracking his voice. ‘Too many have forgotten! Is it really so long?’ Torber strolled over to the bar and leaned back against it casually. ‘Do you know this character?’ he whispered through the side of his mouth to the rotund landlord, as the old man paced about the bar.

‘I don’t know his real name,’ the chubby, red-faced barman replied as he tried to buff up a dull pewter tankard with a filthy rag, ‘but everyone around here calls him Old Man Mountain. He’s an odd fellow. He’s been around for as long as anyone here can remember. People sometimes tell of seeing him striding through the snow-drifts up beyond the tree-line but they always steer clear of him. He’s never actually come down into the village before, though – I’d be careful not to anger him if I were you,’ the barman warned. ‘Don’t worry, he doesn’t frighten me. I’ve dealt with his type before.’

In truth, Torber Badenov had indeed encountered many strange old men in his time as a mercenary on the borders of Kisle, and the obscure pronouncements of this addled mountain-dweller troubled him about as much as a Goblin did a Dragon. Yet despite the stranger’s obvious great age, Torber noticed that there was a certain bearing about him. He hefted himself tall and proud, looking every bit a man of thought as well as action and Torber was sure that his great bear-skin doak hid powerfully muscled arms.

Moving back to his table, Torber motioned to the enigmatic character with his tankard. ‘Come then, tell us your story, old man. Make it a good one and we might just buy you a drink for your troubles.’
The stranger stopped pacing and turned his piercing amber eyes on the mercenary and his companions. ‘We have little time, so listen well,’ he said, coldly determined, and I will tell you of the Hounds of Winter.’

Oran Scarfen rose from his stool and swept his hand to it sarcastically, but the old man refused to sit and kept pacing with nervous energy.

‘It was a night much like this, when people gather around their campfires to tell each other stories that make the blood run cold. It was a time when the tide of Chaos was rising in the land. It was Midwinter’s Eve.’

‘Get on with it. I thought time was short,’ jeered Scarfen. All but the old man laughed.

‘An Imperial patrol was escorting a wagon train from Talabheim to Kislev. Three days into the journey, a Chaos warband attacked! The old man’s earnest voice held the attention of the assembled warriors – perhaps this was to be a fine tale after all.

‘Outnumbered, the patrol was routed. Many brave men were killed by Beastmen and Chaos warriors that night. The soldiers thought themselves all doomed.’

The old man paused, coughed to clear his throat and gestured for a tankard. Badenov passed over Scarfen’s, stopping the latter’s complaint with a wicked grin. The stranger supped a few mouthfuls before continuing. ‘Then, from out of the wilds came a being who seemed to be as much beast as man. He wielded deadly, sorcerous powers, and fought against the Chaos vermin. “I was a wizard, come to aid the soldiers in their fight.”’

By now, Old Man Mountain had quite an audience, his story gripping even the most hard bitten adventurers in the bar. ‘But the foul enemy was too strong, and in the end there was nothing for it but flight, to spread word of the coming of Chaos to Kislev and maybe the Empire beyond.’

‘Hurry it along, old timer,’ Oran interrupted. ‘Cut to the chase.’

‘Listen,’ the old man reproached his heckler. ‘Every detail is important. You must hear it all!’

‘Very well, mountain man,’ said Torben, ignoring his glare. ‘Tell us everything, but get on with it!’

‘The Winter King, Champion of Chaos, led this warband. His infamous acts of cruelty had carved him a reputation as bloody as his crimes.’ He paused a moment. ‘As the survivors of the wagon train fled from his clutches, the Winter King called on his dark gods for help, and from the red mist of battle his vile, Chaos-souled powers shaped the dread forms of daemonic hounds.’ The old man sniffed the air dramatically. ‘Picking up the scent of the fleeing survivors, the abhorrent beasts bounded off into the night in pursuit of their human prey.’

The old man shot his audience a glance to make sure that he now had their full attention. Satisfied that this was so, he went on.

‘Though it appeared that the wild man’s arrival had been a stroke of good fortune, this wizard had in fact been trailing the warband for some time. The Winter King had stolen a magical crown from an ancient burial mound, a crown imbued with the power to command the forces of Chaos. The wizard knew that if Khorne’s Champion reached the Empire, he might unite the twisted creatures of the dark gods dwelling within the Forest of Shadows into an unstoppable army. The warband had to be stopped before it reached the Empire’s gates!’

‘Where did the survivors make their stand then?’ Torben interrupted.

‘I was just getting to that!’ the old man snapped, taking a moment to compose himself again before resuming the story.

‘The wizard led the few survivors to a circle of standing stones carved with powerful, ancient runes and sigils. By accident or design, it was a fitting place for their last stand. The brave soldiers fought beyond their measure, but died one by one, until only the wizard remained.

‘Even in death, however, their energies combined with the magic of the place to imbue him with a terrible power. With the roar of a beast, the wild sorcerer shed his last vestiges of humanity and took on the aspect of a mighty bear. Raging and clawing, he drove off the servants of Chaos, though suffering terrible wounds himself.

The old man’s words were so vivid, and so heartfelt, that all who listened were held entranced.

‘Trapped and beaten, The Winter King slunk away into the darkness to die, cursing the wizard. He vowed that though the wizard had won the battle, the war would continue in death and beyond. He would return…’

The old man looked up, his story done. ‘That is the saga of the Winter King.’

A hasty silence hung over the bar. At last Torben spoke: ‘Well, you’ve earned your drink – that was quite some tale.’

‘But it’s not just a tale, it’s real, I tell you! Now is the time! The moons are in conjunction and the battle will be fought again!’

A thunderclap shattered the night, shaking the inn and causing every lantern to flicker. Above the winter gale could be heard the savage baying of hounds. All eyes turned to face the stranger in disbelief.

‘They’re here,’ he said.

Torben’s hand moved instinctively to the hilt of his sword. As the inn’s customers listened they could also make out the sound of harness jangling, the snorting of steeds and the clink of armour.

‘It is time, old man!’ came an icy voice from beyond the door, heavy with damned resignation and full of menace. ‘Are you within?’

‘I am!’ the old man called back, his voice strong and unwavering.

‘And are you ready to die again?’

‘We will see.’

‘Then prepare to defend yourself!’

An order was shouted – and it was as if all hell had been let loose. The first of the dogs assailed the inn, shutters splintering under their claws and muzzles as the monstrous creatures tried to batter their way inside.

‘Now this is just too much!’ Torben exclaimed, rising to his feet, sword already in his hand. ‘One old lunatic I can just about stomach, but this is going too far. Are you with me, lads? There was a growl of agreement from the mercenary’s companions and they jumped to their feet, weapons at the ready.

‘Ah, at last. The brave warriors remember their part in all this,’ the white-maned stranger said enigmatically. ‘Together we will drive the evil from this place!’

Ignoring the old man, the mercenary adjusted his armoured jerkin and continued to urge his band of fighters on. ‘Come on, lads! Let’s give these deviants a taste of cold steel. That’ll soon calm their appetite for destruction!’

By now the rest of the inn’s customers were also preparing to fight – it was plain that their only chance of survival depended on it.

‘Follow me!’ the bear-cloaked stranger shouted above the blood-curdling howls of the hounds, the war-cries of Chaos Warriors and the braying of Beastmen. Flinging open the great oak door of the inn, the old man stood silhouetted for a moment in the flickering light of the torches carried by the warband, snow plastering to his hair and beard. ‘Stay within the light cast by the inn!’ he offered as a parting piece of advice, then leapt out into the night. The defenders followed unhesitatingly, as if the old man held greater sway over them than they realised.

Once outside the inn, it appeared to Torben as though all hell had broken loose. The great dogs that assailed them were no creatures born of the material plane but blood-red monsters with slavering jaws and scaly hides. The Flesh Hounds were possessed of an unbridled fury and hurled themselves at the humans, trying to clamp an arm or a leg in their teeth, to rend their victim limb from limb. Beyond the vanguard formed by the daemonic creatures pressed a rabble of brutish Beastmen and spike-armoured warriors, their faces hidden by huge, horned helmets.

As Torben fought on, swinging blow after powerful blow at the mutants and hounds about him, he could not help noticing that at the heart of the warband there fought others whose faces were visible and of a deathly pallor. At the back of the serried lines of mutants and madmen, a shadowy, almost spectral figure appeared to be directing them all.

A spear glowing with orange flame streaked through the swirling snow, hurled by the old man. The missile exploded among a mass of Beastmen, the foul stench of scorched fur filling Torben's nostrils.

So the old man has some magic at his disposal too, Torben thought to himself. There was a lot more to him than first appeared.

Something else was happening too. As he fought, it felt to Torben as if his body was being invigorated by some renewing power that sent new strength surging through his arms and legs, stimulating muscles that should have become tired from the constant exertion and giving him the stamina to keep battling on. From the curious expression on the faces of his fellows the same thing was plainly happening to them as well.

Through the swirling storm, Morrsleb's light began to dim as the time of the Conjunction neared. Torben had lost track of how long the battle had been raging. The ragged collection of defenders were greatly outnumbered and although they fought with their vigour increased, they were horrified to see those that they struck down rise up again as shadowy wraiths and rejoin the fray.

The battle raged on, Torben fending off the blows of his enemies, his thrusts and parries given extra impetus thanks to the inexplicable invigorating energy affecting him. As he fought, he almost felt like some energy was guiding his hand. It was like no other conflict he had ever taken part in before, and there had been many. It seemed to the mercenary that he had fought this battle before, although not in this lifetime.

One by one, despite their efforts, Torben's companions were being struck down by these otherworldly Chaos fiends. Shooting anxious glances around him he saw their bodies lying motionless in the trampled snow – but there was no sign of any blood or wounds of any sort. With an abruptly silenced cry of surprise, Oran fell to a wraith's sword.

'Do not be concerned for your friends,' the white-haired wizard's reassuring tones came through the snow flurries. 'It is almost time. We must hold them but a little longer.'

The Chaos horde, and particularly their leader, appeared to be becoming more and more agitated at their failure to break through the defenders' line and assail the inn. The Beastmen and warriors were driven by some overwhelming need unknown to Torben and the others. Their shadowy leader screamed orders to the rabble, his desperation adding an intensity to their attack – and making the defenders' struggle to hold them off seem all the more important.

At last the heavenly bodies completed their movements and an all-encompassing darkness fell over the battlefield. Now the only illumination came from the horde's torches and the interior of the inn.

'Now it is time,' the old man hissed with satisfaction. 'Retreat into the inn!' At his command, the few survivors hurried back towards the welcoming glow of the great stone portal, dragging the chill bodies of their fallen comrades with them. As Torben dragged Oran's body over the threshold, he could see not a mark on him, and yet he had himself seen him struck down with a ghostly blade. When all were safely back inside, the door was barred and the defenders prepared to meet their end.

'Where's the old man?' Torben exclaimed suddenly, looking around.

'He must still be outside,' the landlord realised with horror. 'He'll never survive out there alone.'

'But will we survive in here together?' a haggard local lamented.

With a chilling clarity that cut through the howls of the Chaos hounds, the defenders heard the church bells start to chime midnight down in the valley. As the last chime tolled, the great roar of a raging beast drowned out the barking of the Flesh Hounds. Curiosity driving them, Torben and the others leapt to the shuttered windows and tried to peer through the cracks to see what was going on, but all was black as pitch. They could nothing, but they could certainly hear the slaughter that was taking place beyond the walls of the inn all too clearly.
The defenders remained transfixed,
listening to the wailing of the Chaos horde, and were chilled to the marrow by the bellowing of the monster that had suddenly appeared amid the carnage.
At last the sounds died, the cries of those apparently still able to flee fading into the distance. Even then the humans did not dare move from the protection of the inn, for fear of what they might find outside.

Dawn came, and with it the confidence to leave the inn.
Unbarring the great door, Torben cautiously ventured out into the crisp, cold morning.
The snowy ground was littered with the bodies of Flesh Hounds rapidly decaying in the grey light. Here and there lay the corpse of a Beastman or iron-clad warrior, but there were far too few to account for the sounds of slaughter that they had all heard at midnight. Of the bodies of the Chaos Lord and his awful retinue there was no sign. Neither was there any trace of the old stranger, dead or otherwise, or any monstrous beast.

Where had they all gone? Torben wondered. The old man could not have survived the onslaught of the entire warband and the midnight monster. He peered in alarm at a set of clawed, bear-like footprints that lead away through the snow towards the mountains. There were no matching prints leading towards the scene.

'Mercenary!' the landlord's bewildered, astonished voice called from inside the inn. 'Your companions are returning to life.'

Torben hurried back inside. On the floor where his body had been laid, Oran was sitting up, rubbing his head and looking around him dazedly. The others who had also fallen to the wraith-like fiends were similarly stirring, as if waking from a deep sleep.

'How can this be?' Torben asked in amazement, kneeling down beside his friend. 'What happened to you?'

'When I was struck by the wraith it felt as if something chill and evil had struck me,' Oran said vaguely. 'I was consumed with the most agonising death throes which ill-matched the wound I thought I had received. It was as if I was reliving the heroic demise of someone else from another time. Then I blacked out.'

Torben stood up, rubbing his head with both hands, as if that would somehow help him to make sense of the night's bizarre events.

At last he spoke again: 'Ho, landlord, I think opening time has come early today.
Crack open that cask of Bugman's
XXXXX I know you've been keeping back. I think we've all earned it!'

The mercenary looked back through the open doorway at the battlefield. What exactly had taken place during the Conjunction of the Two Moons? The sun had struggled through the snow-choked clouds, casting its wan light onto the portal. On one of the ancient cornerstones of the inn, it picked out a number of agecroded markings etched into the stone.
Stepping over to the threshold to take a closer look, Torben ran his fingers over the carved symbols.

The stone was huge, apparently set deep into the ground. Something told Torben that it had lain there a long time, longer even than this old inn had stood here. The building had no doubt been made from local stone; despite having borne the weathering of the elements for centuries the markings were plainly ancient symbols. The adventurer traced the shape of an arrow under the lichen. His curiosity satisfied, he gave a shrug and returned to the bar and the hopeful expectation of a quiet drink at last.

As the solid oak door closed behind him,
the rusted inn-sign creaked in the breeze,
its picture of a rampant bear almost faded
now beyond all recognition.

Addenda to records F and G.

The following records remained unerased after the fall of the Voltschag on Antirrum. Katallus, known as the Corpsemaker, escaped with his renegades, but of the turncoat planetary lord Galen there was no sign. Mayhap these excerpts shed light on the issue.

The Mouth of Katallus was all but dead when the Inquisition probed its twisted mind-book, but at least one partial record pertaining to this meeting was extracted:

I know that whatever the Space Wolves do is not due to the snivelling ambassador.

However, once the battle is over and the hated humans destroyed, I WILL HAVE THE GALEN CREATURE'S HEAD SERVED ON A PLATE — I SAVOUR THE RICH TASTE EVEN NOW!

The costumes, models and story have been put together by Tom Luten and his team at Bright Light Studios in Coventry. Look out for "Operation Stormfrost", featuring the Space Wolves of Skald Ironfang, in issue 1.
Here are the original design sketches which led to the Empire steam tank. You may need a magnifying glass to get the best from this spread, but it will be well worth the effort.
Ralph Horsley from Leeds laboured long and hard getting this together, using reference material from the sketches of Leonardo da Vinci and the like. I expect that if you were handy with welding gear, you could use these diagrams to fabricate your very own steam tank— and the frightening thing is that it might just work! (This is not a challenge!)
Colin MacNeil and Gordon Rennie are comic professionals of long standing. Hailing from way up north over the border, in fact. Gordon has written a 12-page comic strip for issue 2 of Inferno! Entitled "Bloodquest", it tells a tale of honour and despair amongst the Blood Angels. Colin’s drawing is, as you read this issue, but when we saw his initial concept sketches and Gordon’s finished script, we liked "Bloodquest" so much that we badgered them into doing this special 2-page prologue.
Since that time he has fought a thousand battles on a thousand different worlds, fusings his life to his Emperor and his Chapter.

His bravery and abilities were noted, and he quickly rose through the ranks.

...in less than fifty years he was promoted to Captain and commanded a full company of one hundred Space Marines.

He showed great promise and Lord Dante himself personally chose him to lead his company on a mission of the utmost importance to the Imperium.

...in defence of an Aditus Astronomica warp-station against an overwhelming force of Ork Raiders.

The mission succeeded, but at a price too high for his Chapter to bear.

Now the Warrior Wall...

Now, the greatest test of all lies before him.

I am ready, Brother-Chaplain. My soul is prepared...

A GRUDGE TOO FAR...

We fight the entire Grudge of Drong campaign! Three battles lead to a bitterly fought conclusion as the noble High Elves and grudgesome Dwarfs struggle for supremacy.

THE STORY SO FAR

In a secluded harbour on the coast of the Old World, overlooked by towering crags, lies the Elven trading colony of Tol Eldroth. Here, the Elven trading colony with the Dwarfs from the surrounding mountains, loading their sleek Elven ships with Dwarf gold, silver, and gems.

Two Dwarf strongholds lie within trading distance of Tol Eldroth. To the North is Kazad Thrund, ruled over by the sturdy hand of Drong the Hard. To the East is Krag Bryn, ancestral home of the Dwarf Queen Helgar. With both strongholds vying for lucrative trade, rivalry is intense, to such a point that war seems inevitable. Already the armies of Drong are marching on Krag Bryn. Helgar, who lacks the military might to stand against them by herself, has pleaded to the Elves of Tol Eldroth for aid.

It is at this point that we join matters. The new range of Warhammer Campaign packs allows you to take historical settings, like the one described above, and fight them out for yourselves. A series of small clashes lead into a final climactic battle, with the results of each affecting the final outcome. In the Grudge of Drong Campaign pack, you take the forces of Drong the Hard as you battle against the High Elves to take control of the lucrative resources around Kazad Thrund and Krag Bryn.

We recently fought out the entire Grudge of Drong campaign, from start to finish. Nigel, who wrote the campaign, took control of the Dwarfs, and Tuomas, who's just finished work on the new High Elf project, used the Elves. And here, for your entertainment, is what happened...

THE WRATH OF DRONG

Nigel: Campaign battles excite me far more than ordinary one-off battles. Even if I am only going to fight one battle out of the campaign, I like the idea of having a proper objective to fight for. It gives a purpose to the battle and concentrates the mind. The tactical problems are focused on the victory gains, not just on destroying the enemy army. The possibility of snatching a sudden death victory can encourage you to make bold moves which you would otherwise hesitate to do. It is amazing how effective these can be! Then you really start to learn something about tactics. I also like playing with armies of 2000 points or less. Even if I am playing with more points I usually opt for higher quality troops so that my army will be compact and powerful. If I have too many things in the army I just forget about something, or my troops get in each other's way!

I was happy to command the Dwarfs in this campaign because I like playing with solid reliable warriors. Such troops allow you to do bold things and employ unorthodox tactics. Dwarfs frequently surprise me as to just how hard to beat they are. The campaign includes some exceptionally hard and stubborn Dwarf characters which enhance this aspect of the army even more.
I was yet more limited in my choice of troops beyond that imposed by the battle scrolls because the army I had available was badly in need of reinforcements. This meant choosing more Thunderers and Crossbows than I would want, and I frequently ended up using these as hand-to-hand fighters. However, I am quite happy to throw missile troops into the battle, rather than stand around shooting which is seldom decisive.

The Elven army has far greater mobility than the Dwarfs and I guessed that Tuomas would try to use his mobility to the full. I know that mobility is highly regarded in his tactical thinking. Being surrounded and attacked in the flank is an even greater threat to my Dwarfs than Elven firepower. Usually everyone forms up in four ranks to benefit from the rank bonus and usually this makes sense. However, this has become such a dogma that no one seems to think about what they are doing. If I adopt this formation, it leaves plenty of space for fast Elves to go around my flanks and provides good targets for the enemy bolt throwers. I shall therefore fight in successive battle lines.

These are my well-tried tactics against a mobile foe who can outflank me, and also against bolt throwers. The Dwarfs will be good at these tactics because they are individually hard fighters who can be expected to hold their own in a wall of shields, even in a single rank. Behind the first such line will be another one further back. I can trust their morale to hold up to the sight of the first line breaking or being cut down. In the end the Elves will have to fight their way through each line getting weaker all the time.

The battle that I most need to win is the Ambush on the Dwarf road. This is because I believe in runes rather than war machines. The most useful gains to me from any other victories would be the characters to bolster my battle lines in the final battle. As for war machines, they would be useful, but I can manage without. And as to the loss of...
500 points of troops if I lose the Brewery Bash, as long as my force is compact and well chosen I’m just not that bothered if it does end up under strength!

PREPARING FOR WAR

Thomas: Normally a chance to fight in a battle report is greeted with overwhelming enthusiasm, but when I was offered the High Elves to field, my all-time favourite army, I was pleased beyond reason. Our High Elf army has been growing with the imminent release of the High Elf book, and I was to fight the entire Grudge of Drong campaign against my fellow Games Developer Nigel Stillman. This suited me fine. Even though Nigel had designed the entire campaign, with my in-depth knowledge of the High Elves I was confident that I could lead the glorious host of Ulthuan to victory.

I studied the miniature cabinets long and hard, looking to Hoeth, the Elven god of wisdom for assistance. I needed an overall plan for the campaign, and suitable troops to carry out my orders. I had only a limited amount of time to spend on selecting my army. Besides the High Elf army represented the forces of Tol Eldroth, so I wanted a unified force to show this. Thus I used many of the same regiments in all of the battles, and my overall plan remained roughly uniform throughout.

Inspired by Hoeth, I decided to base the core of my armies on High Elf Spearmen together with Silver Helm and Dragon Prince cavalry. I very often play defensively with my Elves, but when going against the Dwarfs I decided that my Archers, while capable troops with their new special rules, did not have sufficient strength to stop the Dwarfs. The Dwarfs have high toughness and good armour save values. Having said that, I did not completely overlook missile troops. Repeater bolt throwers are always worth taking, so when these were available I gladly dished out points for them.

My basic plan for almost all of the battles was the same: hold the centre with infantry and cave in the enemy flanks with cavalry. If I could envelop the advancing Dwarfs I could hit them from all directions! While my troops were manoeuvring, my Archers and bolt throwers would shower the short ones with steel-fanged death.

Both my choice of troops and their equipment was very limited in most of the battles in this campaign, due to the campaign restrictions. My choice of magic items was especially limited. This suited me fine, though. Normally the choice of magic items plays a major part in the selection with any Warhammer army, but in these campaign battles this would have less effect. I would have to put my faith in rank-and-file troops and good tactics. Besides, the Dwarfs would be equally restricted in their army selection, so at least I wouldn’t have to deal with so many of those damned runes!
The battle of Grudge Pass

The ravines leading to Krag Bryn were soon resounding with the shouts of the rebel Dwarfs: "Down with Queen Helgar!", "Dwarf gold for the Dwarfs!" and "Drong for King!". Fendar, an experienced High Elf captain, responded quickly, riding out to intercept the Dwarfs. The two armies met at Grudge Pass.

Fendar spread out his army to cover the width of the pass, before riding forward and gouging a line in the dirt with his sword. As the Dwarfs approached, Fendar issued a warning: cross the line and war with the Elves would be provoked. The drunken Dwarfs, led by Master Engineer Krudd Mad-Matlock, let out a loud, raucous cheer as the Elves drew their bows and took aim. The Battle of Grudge Pass was about to begin...

The Dwarfs wasted no time crossing the line in the dust, staggering forward drunkenly. In the centre of the Dwarf line, Miners and Dwarf Warriors advanced on the Elves, whilst the veteran Long Beards moved to the high ground on the Dwarf’s left flank. Thunderers spread out to cover the right flank.

Meanwhile, the Silver Helms were swinging wide around the abandoned mine shafts that lay

---

1. The High Elf Silver Helms charge into the Dwarf Long Beards, wiping the unit out. With the Dwarf Veterans out of the way, the High Elf cavalry continues to swing around the Dwarf flank.

2. Meanwhile, the Elven spears engage the Dwarf Warriors. With the Dwarfs already much weakened by the High Elf magic, the Elven unit meets with little resistance.
The Dwarf Army was led by the Dwarf Lord, a powerful warrior known for his skill in battle. Behind him were scores of Dwarfs, each one armed with a fierce battleaxe. The Dwarf Army was well-organized and efficient, moving quickly and with great purpose. Their uniforms were a mix of metal and leather, each Dwarves had their own distinctive weapons, from axes to swords. The Dwarf Army was feared by all who encountered them, for they were not just warriors, but a force of nature, unstoppable and relentless.

As the Dwarf Army approached the field, the sounds of battle could be heard in the distance. The Dwarf Lord raised his arm, signaling for his troops to charge. The Dwarf Army surged forward, axes held high, ready to strike. The enemy forces were no match for the Dwarf Army, who overwhelmed them with their strength and skill. The Dwarf Army emerged victorious, their banner raised in triumph.

The Dwarf Army continued its march, its reputation spreading far and wide. It was said that whenever the Dwarf Army appeared, the land shook with fear. But to those who knew them, the Dwarf Army was a force of good, a protector of the people. They lived by the code of honor, never breaking their word or dishonoring their comrades. The Dwarf Army was a study in discipline, dedication, and bravery, and they would be remembered long after they had passed.
Meanwhile, the Dwarf Runesmith Grung Grudge-Bringer was spreading tales to cast spite against the Elves. Indeed, Grung had been helping Drong in the planning of a grudge war against the Elves. When the Elves got wind of this through Helgar, they immediately set about dealing with this problem. An opportunity soon arose, and as Grung marched down the Dwarf High Road, no doubt intent on some mischief or other, he found himself ambushed by a force of Elves hiding amongst the rugged terrain between Krag Bryn and Kazad Thrund.

As the Dwarf retinue marched down the Dwarf High Road, Elven Archers emerged from over the crest of the hills that edged the road. To one side of the Dwarfs was a great chasm, to their other side an ambushing army of High Elves – they were trapped! Elven arrows rained down on the Dwarfs, felling many of the Slayers, while a regiment of Elven spear advanced to cut off Grung’s retreat back down the road. The Elves had also brought with them three Great Eagles, allies from the surrounding crags, who took to the sky ready to dive down on the Dwarfs if they attempted to flee.

The Dwarf Slayers immediately headed towards the High Elf Archers. Better to die gloriously in hand-to-hand combat that be shot down from afar by the cowardly Elves! Behind them, the Crossbows and Hammerers reformed to be better able to meet the Elf attack.

While the High Elf Spearmen advanced around the back of the Dwarf marching line, the Eagles dropped in front, leaving them nowhere to run. Although Grung could hold off the Elf attack for a time using his Fiery Ring of Thori, it was inevitable that bitter close quarter fighting would erupt eventually.

When combat did begin it truly was in earnest, raging across the entire battlefield. The Great Eagles swooped in on the Dwarf Crossbows, the Tuomas: In this battle I had to take some very un-High Elf like risks, which didn’t pay off. I could have tried just sitting back and shooting him up with my missile troops, but I think the way I played was much more exciting. Deploying the Archers as I did at short range meant that I could maximise their effect by shooting at close range from the very start of the game.

Unlike the Dwarfs, it’s hopeless trying to use Elven missile troops in hand-to-hand combat, as I think was demonstrated by the ease with which the Slayers dealt with my Archers.

Elven Spearman charged in to engage the Dwarf Hammerers, and the Slayers threw themselves into combat against the Archers.

The Archers were the first to break and flee beneath the savage onslaught of the Slayers. However, the fate of the Slayers themselves was sealed. As soon as they had cut down the Archers, they felt the ground shake beneath them. Tethan the High Elf Mage had summoned an Assault of Stone, and the Slayers were soon crushed beneath the hill on which they had been fighting.

The rest of the High Elf army fared little better than the unfortunate Archers. The Dwarf Crossbows, although poorly equipped for hand-to-hand combat, were quickly able to see off the Eagles and with a glorious display of athleticism they ran them down as they fled.

The Spearman did somewhat better, standing and fighting to the bitter end. Indeed, several times it seemed as if the Elves would turn the tide and sweep the Dwarfs before them. However, with Grung fighting in their midst the Dwarfs proved too much, and eventually the Elves were ground down until the last of their number fell. It had been a crushing victory to the Dwarfs.

The loss of this battle would have extremely severe consequences for the Elven war effort. They had failed to stop the Runesmith from joining up with Drong’s army, and had seen much Elf blood spilt in the process. Now, Drong’s army would have almost unlimited access to magic Rune items for the final conflict. In addition, Grung himself would be present, and having such a fierce warrior to fight at his side would be a great aid to Drong.

BATTLE 2 - AMBUSH ON THE DWARF ROAD

1. The High Elf Archers are the first to break, under the onslaught of the Slayers. The Slayers are then crushed by an Assault of Stone cast on the hill on which they had just been fighting.

2. The Great Eagles are driven off by the Dwarf Crossbows. The Dwarfs chase after their winged foes and slay them all.

3. The High Elf Spearman charge the Dwarf Hammerers. After some bitter fighting, the Dwarfs finally gain the upper hand and the Elves break and flee.
THE BREWERY BASH

As anyone can tell you, the way to a Dwarf’s heart is through his beer. And it was with this thought in mind that the Elves of Tol Eldroth set out to kidnap Drong’s Brewmaster, Largs. Without their regular ale ration, Drong’s troops would soon begin to lose hope and desert. In addition, the deadly Dwarf Gyrocopters are powered by a special high-octane fuel, which only the Dwarf Brewmasters know the secret of brewing. Without Largs, the Dwarfs would be unable to make use of any of these dangerous flying war machines.

In order to recapture his brewery and free Largs, Drong dispatched an elite force of hand-picked (and thirsty) Dwarfs to deal with the Elf kidnappers. These Dwarfs were led by Skag the Stealthy on a mission to rescue the Brewmaster or die in the attempt.

Approaching the brewery, the Dwarfs found the Elves ready in good defensive positions. The main access to the brewery was guarded by a large unit of Elf Spearmen, with two regiments of Archers covering them from behind the adjoining walls. Additionally, two units of Elf cavalry were in wait on either side of the brewery grounds, ready to attack the flanks of any approaching Dwarf troops. Skag, however, earning his title of Stealthy, had already dispatched a small unit of Thunderers to sneak up around the back of the brewery. From here, they could either break in unnoticed to free the brewmaster, or attack the Elf defenders from behind. They were also well positioned to take out the deadly High Elf repeater bolt thrower.

Apart from this sneak force, the bulk of the Dwarf army was to attempt a frontal assault, led by the Hammerers, and supported by the Crossbows and Organ Gun.

The battle began with an exchange of volleys between the two sides’ war machines and other missile armed troops. Dwarf Crossbows fell to Elf Archers, Elf Spearmen fell to the Dwarf Organ Gun until eventually, with both sides depleted and the Organ Gun no longer functioning, the two sides had closed to within charge distance.

The Dragon Princes were the first of the Elves to charge, lowering their lances at the Dwarf Slayers. It didn’t take long for the elite Elf cavalry to finish off the crazed Dwarfs, although they didn’t go down without a fight, taking several of the Elven knights with them.

Meanwhile, on the other flank, the Ellryan Reavers had engaged the Dwarf Thunderers. The Reavers’ fortune was not so good, and they were soon driven off by the Dwarfs. However, Tuomas: A defensive battle is always my preferred way of fighting. With the Elven Archers and Spearmen, the idea is very simple. Block the brewery off with the spears while the archers shoot up the opposing troops, and the cavalry cover the flanks.

This is a tough one for the Dwarfs, you really have to think. You can’t just rush in headlong.
Two units of Dwarf Thunderers break the ends of the Elf lines, chasing their foes right round the back of the Brewery.

The main Dwarf attack cannot break the Elves' strong defensive position, and the Dwarf attack is thrown back.

mounted on the swiftest of Elven steeds, the Elves were easily able to escape and regroup, only to be driven off once again. Before too long, the Thunderers had chased the Elf cavalry almost completely round the back of the brewery. Without realising it, the Dwarf unit was almost close enough to the building in which the Brewmaster was being held to break in and set him free!

At the front of the brewery the Dwarf attack was meeting with mixed fortunes. The Elven spears were driven back, only to regroup and return to the fray. Eventually the massed ranks of Elves and deadly hails of Elven arrows proved too much and the Dwarfs were forced to retreat.

This was indeed a severe blow to the Dwarfs. Without their Brewmaster, the Dwarfs would suffer from desertion, and their final army would be considerably below full strength.

The Dwarf Hammerers attempt to crack the High Elves' strong defensive position, but the disciplined Elf Archers and Spearmen will not be budged.
The final battle of the series sees the full might of the Dwarf and High Elf armies clashing in a fight to the death.

Nigel: I’ve always believed in fighting in lines. Columns are good when your flanks are not exposed, but if a column breaks it leaves a hole in your formation. If a line should fall, your opponent is just met with another line behind. Sometimes you have to be prepared to drop traditional tactics. Too many people just fight in columns because it’s what they’ve always done, and what everyone else always does.

Even without his Brewmaster and Engineers, Drong had still resolved to go to war, and Drive the Elves back into the sea. To this end, he marched upon the Elf colony at the head of a large Dwarf army. Hearing news of Drong’s approach from his spies, the Elf Lord Eldroth called together a council of war. Agreeing that fighting Drong was the only reasonable course of action, Eldroth quickly mobilised his army and set off to meet him in combat. Meanwhile, back in Krag Bryn, Helgar was deciding on her course of action. Taking her own personal retinue of Slayers, she too set out towards the impending battle. But on which side would she be fighting? She knew that if the Elves lost, she would lose out on all the lucrative trading deals she had already negotiated. However, she could hardly turn her back on her own kind. Even as the battle begun, Helgar stood watching, unable to decide on whose side she should fight.

Thomas: My initial plan was to combine a direct frontal assault with wide flanking attacks. However, seeing Nigel’s deployment, I realised that this would be largely inappropriate. By deploying in line formation, he had made it much more difficult to outflank him. However, in doing so he had sacrificed his flank bonus. Since the main purpose of my flanking manoeuvres would be to negate any ranks bonus, it no longer seemed necessary.

The struggle began with the High Elf Archers and repeater bolt throwers launching their lethal missiles into the long lines of Dwarfs. Beneath this hail of arrows and bolts the Elven cavalry advanced, supported by Spearmen and the formidable White Lions. A halo of light played about the Elf army as their powerful High mage cast Protect to ward them.

In response to the opening volleys of the Elves, the Dwarfs also readied their missile weapons. Crossbows and Thunderers wheeled and reformd to optimise their shooting, while the Dwarf Cannon levelled its sights on the High Elf battle line. Its first shot was on target, smashing into the repeater bolt thrower covering the Elven left flank.

As the Elf cavalry approached the Dwarf battle line their steeds broke into a gallop, preparing for the charge. The Silver Helms were the first to make contact, their lances smashing into the Dwarf Crossbows who were advancing through the edge of the forest. The Dragon Princes and Spearmen were also soon in position to charge the Dwarf lines and crashed headlong into the front rank of Dwarf Warriors.
All across the battlefield the Elves charge their foe. Before long the first line of Dwarfs has been annihilated.

Battle 4 – The Battle of Krag Bryn

Only on the Elves’ right flank does their attack fail, and despite some initial success the Elllyrian Reavers break and flee from the battle.

The mighty war hosts of the Dwarfs and High Elves prepare themselves for the bloody carnage which is about to begin.
As the frontal attack raged, the Ellyrian Reavers swept wide around the left flank of the Dwarf position, and the Great Eagles flew in to harass the Dwarf’s right flank. Certainly, the Dwarf formations looked solid, but could they hold out against such a determined High Elf attack?

The Dwarf Crossbows stood little chance against the charge of the elite Silver Helms, and were soon fleeing back towards Kazad Thund. The E.f cavalry pursued them closely, careering into the line of Dwarf Warriors behind. As the melee raged in the centre, both sides suffering heavy losses, but neither willing to break, the rear lines of Dwarf Long Beards and Hammers edged forward, ready to clash with the High Elves if their first line of Warriors gave way.

By now, the Elf attack was closing in on all sides. The Ellyrian Reavers had engaged the Dwarf Crossbows on the hill near the river, while the Eagles were making short work of the Dwarf Cannon crew.

All this time Helgar just stood and watched, still undecided as to her best course of action. She had no wish to join with the losing side, and with the Elves seeming to be gaining the upper hand she was reluctant to go against them.

The melee in the centre was rapidly intensifying as each side poured in every unit they could. Drong called out a challenge, but before the High Elf general could reply, one of his Champions had rushed forward to engage the Dwarf leader in single combat. The Elf died quickly, the first of many to fall beneath the hammer of Drong. One by one, the cream of the Elven army answered the challenge, and one by one they fell as the bloody battle raged around them.

The White Lions had swung around to support the Ellyrian Reavers in their flank attack, but they arrived too late. The Reavers, preferring the hit and run tactics of the open plains, could not hold for long against the Dwarf regiment they fought. They broke and fled, and though the Dwarfs were too slow to catch them they were unable to rally and fled off the battlefield.
The Elf missile weapons still continued to rain death upon any Dwarf unit that was foolhardy enough to move into range of their shots. More and more Dwarfs fell, until eventually the entire regiment of Thunderers who had been guarding the right flank of the Dwarf army lay dead.

But this hardly seemed relevant. The result of the battle would surely rest on the mass combat that still raged in the centre of the field. The Dwarf Warriors had finally given way, the Hammerers and Long Beards moving up to engage the Elves in their place. Still Drong continued to crush the Heroes and Champions of the Elves. Before long, the bodies of six of the finest Elf warriors lay around him. There were none left worthy enough to answer his challenge. except for the Elf general himself. Seeing the fate of his comrades, Eldroth was quite understandably reluctant to duel Drong. And so, with the mocking shouts of the Dwarfs ringing in his ears, he withdrew to the rear ranks of his own regiment to avoid the Dwarf challenge.

The White Lions had by now finished what the Ellyrian Reavers had started, and had crushed the Dwarf’s left flank. Wheelling around, they too charged into the massed melee in the centre. Still, neither side was willing to break. Both Elves and Dwarfs were quite prepared to fight to the death if they had to.

Before long, the skill and armour of the Elves began to dominate. The front lines of Dwarfs were falling faster than their reserves could fill the gaps, and as the Elves began to wrap around the flanks and rear of the Dwarf lines they fell even faster. Soon, dead bodies lay everywhere, with only a single Dwarf remaining. It was Drong, standing atop a pile of crushed Elves and shouting his defiance of the cowardly Eldroth. But with his army destroyed, Drong no longer posed a threat. Shouting was all he had left to do.

Helgar, quite sensibly, had avoided getting involved throughout the entire battle. She had managed to retain her good relationship with the Elves and Drong no longer posed a threat to her rule over Krag Bryn. Drong returned to Kazad Thrand to brood, and spent many long nights writing his Grudges against the Elves. He desperately appealed to the other Dwarf clans to come to his aid and avenge his humiliating defeat at the hand of the Elves, which ultimately they did. But that’s another story…

And so, with the mocking shouts of the Dwarfs ringing in his ears, he withdrew to the rear ranks of his own regiment to avoid the Dwarf challenge.
THE AFTERMATH

ULTHUAN REJOICES

Tuomas: With the final battle over the Elves were victorious. They had fought an incredibly long and hard campaign, and it showed in the final battle: roughly two thirds of my forces had perished. All the heroes and captains of my troops were dead. The cost of victory had been great. So how did the campaign go if looked through the fey eyes of an Elf?

After the three first battle I was feeling confident that I could take on the Dwarfs. While the Ambush on the Dwarf Road had failed, I had been victorious in the other two. My envelopment tactic had worked well, and though the Dwarfs had always mounted a ferocious defence, the concentration of forces always saw them off.

The Battle of Grudge Pass had ended in a surprising victory: this scenario is especially difficult for the Elves, because all the Dwarfs hate their opponents, and their drunkenness allows them to move incredibly fast (for Dwarfs). Yet despite all of this I was able to stop the Dwarfs and inflict enough casualties to give me a victory.

The Ambush on the Dwarf Road was a bit of a disaster. Despite my best efforts, the Dwarfs absorbed my attack and struck back with vengeance. Their high leadership allowed them to pass any panic or break tests, and the Dwarf infantry proved superior to the Elf citizen soldiers. Tethan’s spells had very little effect in the battle, and the Great Eagles failed me abysmally. My devious ambush ended in a catastrophic defeat.

The Brewery Bash, while very hard-fought and an extremely tight battle, ended in another Elf victory. This was mainly because the Dwarfs found it hard to strike through the defended barricades around the brewery. In individual combats Dwarfs did well, but they failed to reach their main target and rescue the Brewmaster.

With two victories and one defeat under my belt I started the preparations for the final scenario. I knew that the last battle would be hard: the Dwarfs had access to any Runes they wanted, they had a wide selection of troops available, and my right flank was potentially threatened by another Dwarf force led by Helgar.

The final battle was seven turns long. This meant I had to fight a battle of attrition. Not a pleasant prospect when fighting against Dwarfs! I knew I would have to accept heavy casualties. The only model I was not prepared to sacrifice was my General Eldroth. His death would have forced me to take a panic test for each of my units. This could have been decisive, so when Drong kept issuing challenges, I answered them with my Heroes and Champions even though they stood very little chance of even wounding Drong, let alone killing him. I paid a heavy price, but in the end my sacrifices were worth it.

My choice of troops generally echoed by enveloping doctrine, but this time I could afford two fast-moving, hard-hitting cavalry units and an additional regiment of White Lions to support my Spearmen. With two bolt throwers, a regiment of Archers, together with Ellyrian Reavers and Silver Helm and Dragon Prince cavalry I had a powerful, balanced, and fast-moving force.

Nigel surprised me by deploying his troops in long lines instead of using the traditional deep infantry blocks that are the hallmark of the Dwarf army. This did stop me from outflanking the short bearded ones and denied me a chance to penetrate several ranks with the shots from my repeater bolt throwers. On the other hand, Nigel then did not have a massive rank bonus when it came to fighting against my cavalry. Still, the Dwarfs proved as difficult to break as ever. I often had to bring two or more of my regiments to bear before I could deal with the stubborn Dwarfs.

Dice rolls were kinder to me than they were for Nigel. Several times during the battle I had to take break tests, and with one unfortunate roll of the dice everything could have been lost. Also, had Helgar and her retinue joined the battle, things might have gone differently: my flank would have been threatened by orange-haired maniacs and a Dwarf harridan with a big axe!

The new High Elf rules work especially well when defending. The Spearmen in particular have much more tactical value and more staying power in prolonged fights. This was particularly evident in the Brewery Bash, where the Elf Spearmen successfully held their defensive position against the best the Dwarfs could throw at them. Combined with the devastating charges of the High Elf Dragon Princes and Silver Helms, the new High Elves are a force to be reckoned with when fighting against any foe.

THE BOOK OF GRUDGES GROWS

Nigel: It would have been good to win the first battle, so that I could use Krudl and the miners in the final one. They would have been more use to me than war machiæs. It was very good to win the ambush, but I lost the real advantage gained in that battle by forgetting to challenge the Elf general with Grung in the last turn of the final battle! By this point, although he had avoided Drong Eldroth had nowhere left to hide, and Grung was easily hard enough to take him on. With their general dead, there was at least a chance that the Elves would panic and flee. It could have snatched victory from the jaws of defeat! I also forgot to use his Fiery Ring of Thor! The moral is make tactical notes to yourself on a scrap of paper as the battle progresses. Losing the Brewery Bash did not worry me, although I tried to win just for the sake of Dwarf honour and the beer. I set my own objective in this battle which was to try and smash the Elf army and deprive the Elves of Ardath.

In the final battle I did not count on perfidious Helgar joining in on my side. If she did it would be too late, could not have a decisive effect and the Elf bolt throwers were well placed to deal with her retinue of Trollslayers. I decided to try to lure the Elf army into dashing itself on my successive lines of Dwarfs, standing like a solid wall of iron!

Drong slew seven Elf characters, all of which were named in various books of Grudges. Unfortunately Eldroth avoided answering the challenge every time. Alas Grung had obviously had too much Bugmans to remember to challenge him and so that particular grudge remains unresolved.

"Alas! Grung had obviously had too much Bugmans to remember to challenge him and so that particular grudge remains unresolved."

If you turn the page, you'll see we've printed full army rosters for the two armies that fought in the Ambush on the Dwarf Road. The Mail Order Trolls are currently running a special deal on these two forces, which you can find at the beginning of the catalogue.

You may have won this time, but we'll be back!

GAMES WORKSHOP
PARTS SERVICE

For the last 15 years Citadel Miniatures has been hard at work creating the biggest and best miniature range in the world. The Australian warehouse stocks a vast selection of miniatures for all the current games, however there are models from our old ranges and discontinued products that have long been unavailable.

Now gamers looking for ancient metal or separate parts for conversions can call directly overseas to the UK Mail Order Service. Staffed by avid gamers, the UK Mail Order department will be happy to help you with any questions you have about specific miniatures, postage, and the time it will take to ship your order. Prices are based at Australian dollars and all payments are in Australian dollars.

The special UK Archive Service does not replace Australian Mail Order, but instead will augment those services by supplying individual parts and old discontinued ranges.

UK MAIL ORDER
To place credit card orders by phone call 001144 1773 713213. You can fax your orders through on 001144 1773 533453. When writing use this address:

The Grudge of Drong campaign pack was used as the basis for this month’s Warhammer battle report. Grung’s Dwarfs and Tethan’s High Elves were the armies used in the Ambush Scenario which you can read all about on page 100 of this month’s White Dwarf.

GRUNG’S DWARFS

Grung the Runesmith was out for vengeance. He’d brought along a unit of crossbowmen, stout fellows all and sixteen of the finest Hammerers in Krag Bryn. These were backed up by his secret weapon, twenty steadfast Troll Slayers. Unfortunately, they had only just got to the Dwarf High Road when the cowardly High Elves launched their ambush...

The Mail Order deal price for Grung’s Dwarfs is $280.00* with Grung free!

TETHAN’S HIGH ELVES

Determined to prevent the Dwarfs from getting very far out of Krag Bryn, Tethan has put together this elite force of deadly High Elf warriors. As the enemy advance, the archers will pour a hail of fire into the Dwarfs in preparation for the charge of the heavily armoured Elven Spearmen led by their Champion, Tharkan. To provide a swift surprise attack, Tethan sought the help of three Great Eagles...

The Mail Order deal price for Tethan’s High Elves is $280.00* — with Tethan free!

This army, led by the Bretonnian special character Repanse De Lyonesse, is from the Maidens Of Battle article on page 59.

THE BRETONNIAN ARMY OF REPANSE DE LYONESSE

Riding forth from their castles, the gallant knights of Bretonnia are sworn to defend all their countrymen. From the lowliest peasant farmer to the King himself, every Bretonnian citizen can count on the protection of the knightly orders. In times of great peril Bretonnia mobilises its huge armies containing both knights and commoners. At such times, armies are joined and led by heroes of great renown. One such hero is Repanse de Lyonesse. Bearing the Sword of Lyonesse and the magical Fleur de Lya Banner, she is an inspiration to any army that accompanies her.

Mail Order have put together this great army deal which includes Repanse De Lyonesse and Chantelle de la Nuit. a powerful Bretonnian Sorceress. They are supported by a regiment of Knights Errant and six of Bretonnia’s finest Knights of the Realm. A unit of stalwart men-at-arms and some of Bretonnia’s deadly bowmen make up the rest of this hard-hitting Warhammer army.

The Mail Order deal price for this army is $390.00* — with Repanse de Lyonesse free!
